Distributive Education Students Hosts Their Employers Thursday Night; Address by James R. Nelson

The members of the Distributive Education program and their employers heard an address by James R. Nelson, Jackson high school principal, in which he reminded student employees that three important factors, honesty, loyalty and courtesy are prime requisites in holding a job. Present were 43 guests including the employers.

The banquet and program were held last night at the Rustic Rock with employers as guests of their student employees. The welcome address was given by Kenneth Skinner, president of the high school D. E. program; the invocation was given by Doris Hammock, historian, with Billy Vaught introducing the speaker.

Entertainment was provided by Mark Henry, high school student, who gave a 15-minute program of folk songs, following the banquet.

JAMES R. NELSON, speaker at the Distributive Education meeting.

Mr. Nelson, a former Distributive Education instructor pointed out to the young employees the importance of giving their best to their employers who have given them an opportunity of earning as well as learning. Nelson said, "honesty and loyalty are the two most important factors in forging ahead. Show your employer that you are willing to take over a few responsibilities when he steps out and lets you in charge. Do not place all your concern in the amount of salary you receive because the advances will come when progress is shown."

"Courtesies are another important factor, the people you serve are entitled to them, and they in turn will assist you in improving your job, as well as an advancement in salary. I will also remind you employers that it is important for you to show your appreciation to these young men and women for a job well done, and assist these young students to learn how to do a good job better."

Await Federal Approval Before City May Start

DEXTER -- The Conservation Commission will underwrite one-thrid of the cost of mechanical destruction of a blackbird roost at Dexter, Director William E. Towell announced today.

The city is now awaiting final approval from the Federal Wildlife and Game Preserve Commission. The approval is needed since blackbirds are protected, and have made up a large portion of the roosting together with starlings and other birds. A large number of the birds have gone to the outer edge of city, where trees with heavier foliage are available, according to George McCracken, city clerk in Dexter.

Towell said the remaining two-thirds of the cost of the project will be borne equally by the Missouri Division of Health and by local participation.

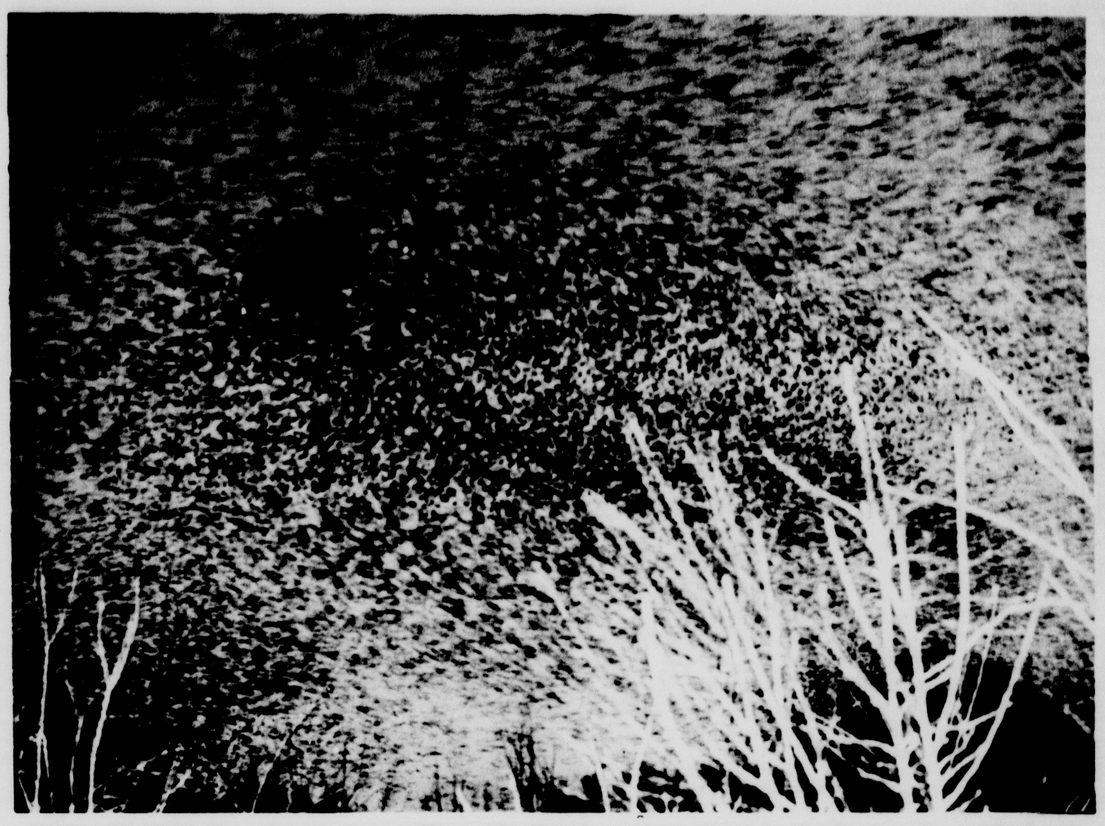

He said he had been assured by Dr. Henry M. Hardwicke, acting director of the Division of Health, of his division's participation and by Rep. Tom F. Baker of Stoddard County that a third of the cost would be borne locally.

Towell said the Dexter blackbird problem is not strictly a conservation matter, nor is it strictly a medical matter, but that he and Dr. Hardwicke felt immediate action on the problem is imperative.

He said the roost will be destroyed by bulldozers or other heavy equipment. The roost area is a region of 20 acres of low brush and scrub timber growth on the edge of Dexter to which millions of blackbirds of all local species returned each year. Residents of the area have been concerned about the supposed threat of histoplasmosis, a lung disease, being carried in the birds' droppings. Local physicians and veterinarians, however, have reported no cases of this disease in Dexter.

Towell said many suggestions --some of them wildly impractical--have been made for control of the birds. These have been deliberately avoided, he said, either because of their impracticality or because the suggested methods would involve the use of gas or poisons dangerous to humans, domestic animals and other wildlife in the area. He said the removal of the roost will be in the nature of an experiment.

There are now an estimated seven million blackbirds using the roost, Towell said, but only two percent of these are starlings, a bird which was believed earlier to be the bulk of the population. He said the other birds on the roost are redwing blackbirds, grackles, cowbirds and other species of blackbirds that winter in southeast Missouri. The seven million, Towell said, is in contrast to a population estimate of some 15 million birds on that roost two years ago.

HOW TO RID the almost ten million blackbirds and starlings in the Dexter area will soon be known, as soon as approval is given by the Federal Wildlife. The approval of the Missouri Conservation Commission has been received. This picture shows a portion of the birds as they are shown leaving a 20-30 acre roosting area in the southwest part of the city, located near a residential area, high school and factory area.

Land For New Baptist School Bought

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Land for the new Missouri Baptist College in St. Louis County was purchased Thursday.

Dr. Frank B. Kellogg, president of the college Board of Trustees made a $79,500 down payment on 80 acres of land which sold for $322,000.

Dr. Kellogg, who also is pastor of the suburban Maplewood Baptist Church, said the estimated total cost of land and buildings for the campus will be about $1,250,000. He said 43 different Missouri Baptist congregations already had pledged $627,324 of this amount.

The college is sponsored by the Missouri Baptist Convention and Southern Baptist Churches of the St. Louis area. The college, with a planned capacity of 500 students, will be a four-year co-educational liberal arts school.

The state already has granted the college a charter.

Five Killed In Light Plane Crash Near K. C.

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Five officials of a Santa Fe Springs, Calif. mobile homes firm were killed today when their plane crashed during a snowstorm.

The plane, which had taken off from Kansas City Municipal Airport, crashed in the Fairfax Industrial district here, just across the Missouri River.

The victims were tentatively identified as Howard Kohler, Lynwood, Calif., president of Biltmore Mobile Homes Corp., Ed Gessler, general sales manager; Edwin Mechsner, Glen Watson and Bob Hite.

The five were believed to have taken off for a return trip to California. They had spent the day Thursday at the Carrollton, Mo. plant of the firm.

The twin-engine plane hit one wing of a parked Constellation at the Fairfax airport and then crashed into a woven wire fence. The plane was demolished, but there was no fire.

Employes of industries near the scene said there was an explosion.

One of the men was believed alive when taken from the wreckage, but he was pronounced dead at St. Margaret's Hospital.

Banana Truck Burns Early This Morning

A banana truck, loaded with 550 boxes of Chiquita Brand may not deliver bananas "without a brusie on the inside" but its a cinch they'll be well cooked-at least most of them.

At 4:45 a.m. today the fire department was called to the intersection of Highways 60 and 61, south of town, when a banana truck of the Southern Shippers, Hattiesburg, Miss., caught fire. The driver, Bill Cross, of Steele, Mo., wasn't sure just how the load caught fire but the fire department thinks maybe it was one of the heaters in the truck.

At 2:15 a.m. today, the fire department was called to 420 Broadway, home of Jerry Halford family. A fire that started in the center of the house, cause, unknown, did considerable damage before it was extinguished.

Church To Be Moved To Westminister

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Marshall Sisson, an English architect, said Thursday the church of St. Mary Aldermanbury in London, which will be moved to the Westminster College campus at Fulton, Mo. this summer as the Winston Churchill memorial library and should be dedicated next year—the 20th anniversary of Churchill's "Iron Curtain" speech at the college.

The church, destroyed by fire in 1666 and rebuilt by Sir Christopher Wren, was bombed in World War II. But the exterior stone walls, bell tower and columns remain.

Sisson, the consulting architect on the project, said the church would be completely restored at Westminster College.

It will serve as a non-sectarian worship center and the library will house a collection of Churchill memorabilia.

The project was launched in 1961 through voluntary contributions. Sisson said preliminary work on dismantling the church is on schedule.

Two Traffic Accidents Thursday

Two of the five traffic accidents reported for Thursday in its 14-county territory by Troop E, State Highway Patrol, took place nearby. There were no fatalities and three were reported injured in the territory.

At 8:10 p.m. Thursday, the Patrol reports, in Chaffee on Highway 77, Forrest Wayne Tuttleton, 19, of Chaffee, made a left turn and a car driven by Argos Johnson, 29, of Vanduser, slid into the rear of the Tuttleton car. Johnson was taken to a Cape Girardeau hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

At 8:20 a.m. Thursday, the Patrol reports, a mile west of Dudley on Highway 60, Travis Riggins, 61, of Dudley, made a right turn. A car driven by Linda Ann Watkins, 18, of Long Beach, Calif.; skidded and hit the other car in the rear. No injuries reported.

Families Plan Move Because Of Goldwater Loss

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two San Diego families who are moving to Australia because Barry Goldwater lost the last presidential election apparently already have something going for them Down Under.

Early Thursday, Robert Ansett, 31, sailed for Australia aboard the Iberia with his wife, their three children and a neighbor family.

Ansett explained that he made a bet with his boss, promising to go to Australia if Goldwater was defeated.

The $175-a-week bakery salesdriver said he was fed up with socialism in the United States.

His partner in the migration, Peter Kemmsies, 30, also is the father of three children.

But it developed after the boat had left Los Angeles that Ansett will be met in Melbourne by his father, Reginald M. Ansett.

The elder Ansett is described as one of Australia's richest men with a wealth estimated at $85.5 million in airlines, buses and trucks, television stations and 20 resort hotels and motels.

Man, Who Feared For His Life, Has Car Bombed

KANSAS CITY (AP)—A man who feared he was marked for death was killed by a dynamite bomb in his car Thursday evening.

He was John R. Simms, 51, secretary-manager of the National Electrical Contractors Association. He joined the association in 1959 after resigning as an official of the Electricians Union Local 124 (AFL-CIO).

It was the second bomb aimed at him. His suburban home sustained slight damage from a blast outside a basement window last Sept. 12.

Associates of Simms said he had expressed fear someone would try to kill him, and he had suspicions as to who it was but he could not put his finger on them.

"There were telephone threats before the first bombing, but none since," said Albert Thomson, Simms' lawyer and president of the city police board. "It had all died down. Nothing had happened for a long time. He did take precautions. He had his house lighted."

Death came in the basement garage of the association's headquarters building.

Simms, the last to leave the building, opened the garage door stepped into his car, and the explosion occurred.

A 12-inch hole was blown in the concrete floor under the car. A similar hole was torn in the top of the car. The interior was shredded, the doors and windows were mangled.

Police said the bomb was either under the seat or under the car and apparently was not touched off by the ignition switch. Discovery of a small battery and fine electrical wire indicated the detonator was activated when Simms sat down on the seat.

Light fixtures were broken in the garage. On the floor above, the concussion broke a glass panel door, blew heating coils out of the floor, cracked concrete walls and overturned a large flower pot.

George Trinastich, president of the association's Kansas City chapter, said he rode to lunch with Simms in the car, and police were told the garage door was locked all afternoon. The garage can be reached through an unlocked door from the first floor inside the building.

"Simms did not seem concerned at all at lunch," Trinastich said. "There were no labor negotiations in progress, or labor trouble. That has all been settled for three years."

Fred Atchity, an official of local 124 which has offices in the building, said he got his car out of the garage and went home about 15 minutes before the blast. He said Simms was shoveling snow off the sidewalk and was talking with an insurance man at the time.

The crack Metro police squad started an investigation.

A police guard was stationed at the dead man's home, where Mrs. Simms was being comforted by close relatives. There are no children in the family.

Denies Charges Of Overplanting Cotton and Rice In Arkansas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has denied coverup charges in the overplanting of rice and cotton acreage allotments in Arkansas.

The accusations were made Thursday in a Senate speech by Delaware Republican John J. Williams. He said such violations of the crop control program could cost the federal government a minimum of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

He said the department was trying to suppress a major scandal, and had refused to provide him information on the situation.

The department replied in a statement that premature release of such data could impair both administrative action by the department, and possible court action by the Justice Department.

It said Williams was advised of this on Feb. 18.

The statement also said:

". . . the department in its normal audit of programs discovered the overplantings and has been vigorously investigating them for the past several months. At one point, over a hundred investigators were assigned to the project. Department personnel were brought in from other states in order to do this intensive and effective investigation."

It said the investigations centered in 32 Arkansas counties and that widespread overplanting was found in five of them, with reports on two already completed and referred to the Justice Department.

Expanding on its privacy policy with regard to the cases, the department said:

"During these and all other investigations we have a duty to protect sources of information and the innocence of those who are falsely accused. To make available these reports where they might be made public would not be in keeping with this responsibility."

More than 450 Teachers to Have Discussion Meeting

Like every other phase of education in the "Three Rs",--readin', writin' and 'rithmetic-great changes in the methods of instruction have been made over the years and are still being made as educators seek newer and more efficient ways of teaching the younger generation.

Probably in the field of teaching reading there have been more striking innovations and changes than in most any other single phase of education.

A Regional Reading Workshop will be conducted from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday at the senior high school which, it is expected, will be attended by more than 450 teachers of reading and administrators from schools in Arkansas; western Tennessee, western Kentucky, southern Illinois and Missouri as far away as Columbia. Among this group of teachers will be 72 from the Sikeston school system.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. and then Lynn Twitty, superintendent of District R-6, the Sikeston schools, will make a short welcoming address and then the meeting will be taken over by three nationally known educators who will lead discussions on a variety of topics pertaining to the art of teaching reading.

Mrs. Bernice T. Clark, of Buffalo, N. Y., director of the Maryvale School System, will make what might be termed "the keynote address of the meeting when she speaks on principles and concepts of "Teaching Reading". This is the new phonetic approach to reading developed in England.

Otto McClintack, University City, Mo., reading co-ordinator of the University City Public Schools and J. Kendall Hoggard, of El Dorado, Ark., director of Instruction in the El Dorado City Schools, will also lead discussion groups.

Robert Miller, of the Sikeston schools, who made arrangements for the gathering reports that at noon the visitors will get their luncheons where ever they may wish to.

Other discussion topics will be "Programmed Reading using machines and devices," "Linguistics Approach to Teaching Reading" and the "Spalding Method of Teaching Reading."

Improvement Of Seed Topic For Gathering

The Missouri Seed Improvement Association held a district meeting last night at the Rustic Rock, with 20 seed dealers and extension agents from four counties present.

Joe Scott, extension field crops specialist at the Delta Center, discussed the crop varieties eligible for certification in this area. Crops discussed were, corn, cotton, soybeans, sorghums, wheat, oats, legumes and grasses.

W. E. Aslin, executive secretary of the Missouri Seed Improvement Association, discussed limited germinating certification to the growers to representatives from New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard and Scott counties. He added that there were 40,000 acres of certified crops in 1964. "We need to produce 10 per cent of the bushels to plant the yearly acreage of crops in Missouri. To do this we should produce 85,000-90,000 acres of certified crops in the state. Grasses are wide open for more acreage to be certified and produced in this area. There will be 200,000 pounds of certified Sunnit lespedeza seed available to be seeded this year.

Mr. Aslin stated that limited generation means limiting the number of years certified seed can be produced from foundation seed. On small grains this limited generation has been started in the fall of 1964. This is soft wheat being grown in this area.

Orders for soybeans are now being taken. Seed corn stocks are also being taken at this time for the 1965 season. For more information on growing certified seed in southeast Missouri, contact Don Lumsden, inspector and fieldman, Missouri Seed Improvement Association, Sikeston.

DEAR SOVIET WOMEN

Never underestimate the power of a Soviet Woman. On or before Monday, March 8 every candy store, every cosmetic shop, every establishment that sells anything of interest to women in the Soviet Union will be raided by husbands, fiances, and sons of all ages. For that is the date of International Women's Day, a kind of St. Valentine's day schmaltzed up, but with the saintliness austerely removed.

Soviet women are movers and shakers. Of all physicians in the Soviet Union, three-fourths are women, as Tass reminded its readers on Women's Day last year. About two-thirds of all economists are women (ah-hah), as are nearly half of all factory workers. The Supreme Soviet has almost 400 women members.

Last year Neues Leben, the German language supplement of Pravda, carried a front page salute to a seamstress who had earned the title of "Activist of Communist Labor," also to a laundrywoman, and a nurse. Tass insisted that the problem of equality for women did "not exist at all" in Russia.

The day has its less sober side. Georgian peasants fly in thousands of little bunches of blue, white, and pink flowers -- anemones, tulips, mimosas, snowdrops, and the yellow flowers Russians call the immortal - for sale in Moscow's Central Market.

All this is in keeping with a trend in the Soviet Union toward glamor. Marriages, once about as ceremonious as a trip to the meat market, are becoming more sentimental, and more and more couples are getting wed in wedding "palaces" instead of district registration centers. More and more brides wear veils and carry flowers. Civil marriage is still referred to as "registration" in the Soviet Union, but the woman who does the registering admonishes the couple of "safeguard your love."

FEDERAL REGISTRARS

The Senate Rules Committee is expected to make its recommendations on modification of the anti-filibuster rule by Tuesday (March 9).

VOTING QUALIFICATIONS for Negro voters in southern states are almost certain to be eased by Congress at the 1965 session, but questions of strategy remain unclear. Two of these seem to have a symbiotic relationship: Should Senate rules be changed to make cloture easier, and should federal action on voting be by statute or by constitutional amendment?

On the first of these, Senate majority whip Russell B. Long (D La.), a principal foe of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, recommends no change in the present requirement of a two-thirds majority of the Senate to cut off debate. Long on Feb. 17 told reporters that Southern legislators may not attempt to filibuster a voting rights bill this year. (He pointed out that Senate liberals themselves might need the filibuster weapon to prevent submission to the states of a constitutional amendment upsetting the U. S. Supreme Court's "one man, one vote" reapportionment decision.)

Long at the same time said that he would favor the use of federal registrars to enroll Negro voters in the South. Liberal Republicans and Democrats have been urging a federal registrar provision in the voting rights measure the Justice Department is readying.

FEDERAL REGISTRARS would have been provided by a bill offered by Rep. Henry Cabot Lodge (R Mass.) and passed by the House in 1891. It called for appointment of federal officials of both parties on election boards in any Congressional district upon the petition of 500 voters.

The bill was debated in the Senate for 46 days, at the end of which the majority attempted to put through a resolution for closure of debate by a majority vote. This resolution met even more determined opposition. A continuous session of four days without adjournment failed to break the filibuster. The proposal of a force bill was then abandoned, never to be taken up again.

Lodge, who was to make historic use of the filibuster himself after moving on to the Senate, wrote in 1893: "The only way in which proper rules for the transaction of business in the Senate can be obtained will be through the action of a party committed as a party to the principle that the majority must rule, and that the parliamentary methods of the Senate must conform to that principle."

Calvin Coolidge in his second annual message to Congress made a cryptic reference to the need for federal registrars. "I am of the opinion," Coolidge wrote, "that the national laws governing the choice of Congress should be extended to include appropriate representation of the respective parties at the ballot box and equality of representation of the respective parties at the ballot box and equality of representation on the various registration boards, wherever they exist."

A GROUP OF 31 Republicans -- five governors, four senators, and 22 representatives -- is urging the use of federal registrars in a statutory adjustment of voter qualification. Sen. Long on Feb. 17 and again in a television interview on Feb. 28 indicated that the federal government had "the right and duty" to intervene in cases of registration under the 15th Amendment.

President Johnson in his State of the Union Message pledged the elimination of "every remaining obstacle to the right and the opportunity to vote." The new amenity of Sen. Long and other senators for whom he speaks that pledge appear to be redeemable.

ONE WORD DID IT

A newspaper publisher in the game a long time told how one word made a difference in an ad.

Seems that a person was headed out west from a midwest city. He wanted one of the family cars driven to the coast, and inserted this ad--

"Owner wants car driven to west coast. Will pay all expenses."

The ad didn't bring any response.

Finally, he changed one word in the ad and the responses poured in. The one word he changed was "Cadillac" for "car."

Perhaps you need to change one word in your advertising copy.

Think about it.

Carbon black -- a sophisticated "cousin" to that unpopular substance, soot -- is one of the most useful products of modern industry, according to an article in Petroleum Today. It is used to strengthen and toughen rubber tires, raincoats and conveyor belts, and goes into bowling balls, typewriter ribbons, eyebrow pencils, television tubes and printer's ink. Its particles are so tiny that the period at the end of a sentence in ordinary printed matter contains nearly one billion particles of carbon black.

NEW YORK (AP) — Well, they're at it again.

"They" are the office cleanliness brigade who keep spotless desks themselves and want everybody else to keep a neat desk, too.

You find these ataxiophobes and amathophobes in every office.

An ataxiophobe is a person with a morbid dread of disorder.

An amathophobe is a person with a morbid dread of dust.

Their motto is, "every paper clip has its place — let's put it there."

They don't have blood in their veins. If you screwed off their heads and turned them upside down, detergent would run out.

Squads of these self-appointed janitors, these memo-pad Mussolinis, have been going by my littered desk lately murmuring things like:

"He's gone too far."

"Really, he's giving the place a bad name."

"It looks like the city dump. I think I saw a rat run out of it yesterday."

Then they go back to their own spotless desks, brushing at their clothing as if they had become contaminated, and spend the rest of the day cleaning their fingernails. They drop anonymous notes in the office suggestion box complaining my desk has become a public health menace.

Well, I say, to hell with all such neurotic nice-Nellies. If they want to clean up something, why don't they clean up City Hall?

What do I care if they call me "the Mayor of Germ Harbor?"

A man's desk should have a worked-in look, just as his home should have a lived-in look. It should bear the signature of his toil and dreams.

I feel a sense of pity when I see an office full of shining desks, their tops as barren of signs of human life as so many dunes in a desert. They seem so meaningless.

Who works at these desks? A number of nameless moles? Their desks show no evidence of belonging to anybody. Maybe they are manned by faceless automatons. Who cares?

I take pride in the condition of my desk. The two-foot pile of debris on it — which also has overflowed an adjoining bookcase, two windows and three file cabinets — took me as long to accumulate as it did the Pharaoh Cheops to build his great Pyramid. But my memorial is just as distinctive in its small way as his.

No one could mistake his pyramid for any other; no one could mistake my desk for any other.

CONGRESS IS URGED TO ADOPT BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT AIDS

The National Association of Manufacturers has urged Congress to adopt economic policies that would encourage American industry to expand its investment in jobcreating activities.

This in turn, the NAM said, would provide a practical solution for the employment problems of Appalachia, as well as for the other lagging regions.

In a statement filed with the Senate Committee on Public Works, the Association recommended economy in federal spending and further tax reduction to improve business incentives and increase funds available for private investment.

"In dealing with the problems of poverty throughout the country the need is for policies which will remove the barriers to economic growth in the productive, private sector of the economu," the NAM said.

Another major objective, according to the association, should be more widespread use of the proven principles of voluntary cooperation -- self-help programs which are accomplishing excellent results in many parts of the country.

Rather than turning to massive government spending programs, the NAM said the nation should seek wider application of practical, workable retraining and re-education programs and community self-help projects that individual companies and communities are using every day to solve local problems.

Almost every motorist who has driven out of his own state has encountered considerable differences in laws and ordinances. With them often came misunderstanding, unintentional law violations and accidents.

The need for agreement on uniform traffic laws has grown with increased interstate motor vehicle travel. Out of this need developed the Uniform Vehicle Code, which is a guide for states. Since its inception in 1926, the Code has been periodically reviewed. Changes have been made where warranted on the basis of its past practical operation and because of new developments in motor vehicle traffic.

At the present time there is a substantial degree of non-uniformity between Missouri traffic laws and the Uniform Vehicle Code in the area of traffic law commonly referred to as "Rules of the Road." These rules of the road deal with those regulations which govern the actions of all drivers and pedestrians.

The Interim Committee on uniform traffic laws has proposed for consideration by the 73rd Missouri General Assembly, a safety bill that would adopt much of the Uniform Motor Vehicle Code with respect to its rules of the road.

Colonel Hugh H. Waggoner, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, declared, "The rapid increase of highways, vehicles and drivers, together with the growing trend toward more interstate travel, stresses the need for sound, uniform rules of the road to govern the actions of drivers and pedestrians where ever they might be.

"I earnestly hope the bill proposed by the Interim Committee will be adopted. The removal of motorists' doubts in such matters of right-of-way, passing and the execution of turns, will better enable motorists to know and obey the rules, regardless of where they travel. It will also make for a more efficient flow of traffic and help reduce the danger of accidents," the Colonel concluded.

DOOM-CRIERS

Thoughtful friends of freedom take pride in calling themselves "constructive." But they need to show if the name fits.

There are too many doom-criers on the freedom side today. The many dangers they point to are great and real. But it is not enough to tell people what is wrong. They must be shown what is right. Otherwise, the predicted doom will come no matter how many warnings are given.

Nearly every patriot knows of far more which should be done than he has any time to do. Nearly every one knows of far more that is wrong than he can possibly put right. But so long as patriots concentrate on telling each other how bad things are, even some of their best friends will begin to dread the moment when they come in sight.

Every informed believer in freedom knows the peril in which we stand today. He does not need to be constantly reminded of that. But he does need guidance in constructive action. People in general need to know far more than they do about the joys and rewards which freedom brings.

It is not even enough simply to say that freedom is good. We must show why Freedom is good, and then more and more people will be inspired to seek it. If we cannot put our country on the right course, at once, we certainly should explain far better than we have yet, just what that course ought to be.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — An unreported human drama took place last weekend at the White House. President Johnson learned that Dr. Gordon Seagrave, the famed Burma surgeon, might be dying and that his son couldn't raise enough money to fly to his bedside in Burma.

Sterling Seagrave, after receiving a cable that his father had collapsed, could scrape up only enough money for a one-way ticket. However, Burma won't admit a visitor who hasn't the means to pay his way home.

In desperation, the son appealed to the State Department for the possibility of government transportation, but its bureaucrats seemed more concerned about red tape than a mission of mercy. No one wanted to waive the regulations against free transportation for non-government civilians.

As a last hope, Seagrave tried the White House. He described his problem to McGeorge Bundy's office, which tried to arrange transportation for him at the Pentagon.

The Burma surgeon, a fourth-generation American missionary who studied medicine at Johns Hopkins University, has devoted his life to helping people. But no one at the Defense Department wanted to stick his neck out to help the good doctor have a last visit with his son.

Finally, Bundy called the problem to the President's attention. Without hesitation, Johnson overruled the bureaucrats. Travel orders were issued to Sterling Seagrave to fly to Burma on the first available Air Force plane.

—TV CRIME—

President Johnson has been searching for a tough Republican to appoint to the Federal Communications Commission. He wants one who will stand up to the networks, not bow abjectly as so many commissioners have in the past. He is anxious to improve children's programs, discourage the crime thrillers and violence which the Senate Juvenile Delinquency Committee criticizes as harming the youth of the nation.

Despite the President's attempt, likeable, gullible Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., has made himself the Senate pressure agent for the networks in trying to scare the FCC away from its probe of network-owned TV programs.

What the charming Senator from Indiana apparently doesn't know is that this is where the real TV gravy lies — and some of the secret payoffs.

To get a program on the network, independent producers frequently are told that the network will take over, act as producer, thus get not only the profit from selling the time to the sponsor, but the profit from producing the show. What sometimes also happens is that the independent has to sweeten the pot with a little private payola on the side somewhere down the line.

—TV MONOPOLY—

Out in Indiana, the state which sent Hartke to the Senate, there is widespread sentiment against the closed shop. But Indiana's man in Washington has lined up vigorously on the side of the closed shop for the TV networks. When Time and Life magazines invested $1,800,000 in Robert Drew and Associates production of ten unique films, they could not get one of them on the two major networks. One, called "Primary", showing the 1960 primary battle between Hubert Humphrey and John F. Kennedy, was finally aired on ABC, together with another, "Yankee, No," the story of anti-Americanism in Latin America.

But despite the prestige of TIME-Life and the investment of $1,800,000, the other eight TV films had to be shopped around to independents.

Some years ago, the Justice Department under Thurman Arnold broke up the major motion picture producers' practice of owning their own theatres on the ground that it both detracted from the quality of motion pictures and restrained independent producers from showing their product. Since then, the quality of motion pictures has increased.

However, the TV networks have got away with exactly the same monopoly in picking programs for their prime time at night. Like the motion picture theatre owners in the old days, they produce the shows they are going to show. Chief difference is that the medium through which they show them is owned by the public while the theatre owners owned their own theatres. Despite this, the gullible Senator from Indiana wants to scare the FCC away from even investigating a situation which it would have cracked down on years ago.

Note — What President Johnson wants is to find a new FCC Republican who won't put his tail between his legs anytime Sen. Hartke or Rep. Walter Rogers of Texas, also an FCC pressure man, says "Boo!"

—MAILBAG—

T. J. Healy, N.Y.C. — The phrase "Iron Curtain" which Winston Churchill used in initiating the cold war, in his Fulton, Mo., speech, was actually borrowed from Hitler's propaganda chief, Herr Goebbels. The phrase has now become so commonplace that most people attribute it to Churchill, not Goebbels. Churchill was following his previous policy after World War I when he initiated Allied help for the White Armies in Russia to overthrow the Bolshevik regime. At that time British stevedores refused to load Churchill's munitions for the White Russians. Churchill deserted his anti-Russian thesis when he became Prime Minister in 1951 and urged a summit conference. By that time the "Iron Curtain" had lost its popularity in Britain and there was a popular demand for resumption of friendly relations with Moscow. . . . William Freedman, Detroit — The President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity has been doing an excellent job of checking equal opportunities for Negroes and other minorities among defense contractors. Lyndon Johnson, when Vice President, got far more action out of this committee than any previous executive.

Inside Labor

By VICTOR RIESEL

Sharp Differences Develop Between LBJ, Labor Chiefs Over Expansion of Trade with Soviet Bloc

WASHINGTON, D.C. — For the first time there are "sharp differences" between President Johnson and his friends in labor's high command, it can be reported on the highest authority.

Imminent is a clash over the White House policy of pushing for expansion of trade with the Soviets and the Eastern bloc of so-called people's republics.

Mr. Johnson, who believes the cold war cannot be fought with rifles and bombers, thinks increased business with the Soviet bloc will disintegrate it.

Goerge Meany — "Mr. Labor" — and many of those around him believe that business, economic, political, diplomatic, credit, and scientific agreements with the Eastern bloc are "worthless" and will simply strengthen the Communist coalition.

Much to the chagrin of Mr. Johnson, the national AFL-CIO Executive Council said so publicly during its mid-winter session in Bal Harbour, Fla. last week.

Mr. Johnson does not understand why the labor leaders chose this moment to attack what he considers one of his most vital international policies.

He is also puzzled by some of labor's public demands or certain domestic issues — demands which he believes are "impractical" and put him on the spot at this time. They call for hiking the national minimum wage to $80 a week and for spending additional billions on public works.

What intrigued the President was Mr. Meany's public announcement that he would seek an appointment with the President to lay these demands before him. Mr. Meany never has had any difficulty in obtaining an appointment.

Usually this is quietly sought and easily obtained. The Meany statement in Florida made it appear that Mr. Johnson is hard to deal with and this reportedly nettled the chief executive.

But what stirred him most in the flow of reports from the AFL-CIO Executive Council Session is labor's attitude towards expanded East-West trade.

One White House source in intimate daily contact with Mr. Johnson said the President is giving this very careful study. The source added that he hoped the labor leaders had not worked themselves into a corner on this issue.

"The President wants the labor movement to approach this problem of East-West trade intelligently and practically," it was said, "rather than adopt a blind oppositionist attitude.

"We will have to take a good look at the resolution passed by the AFL-CIO council and hope the boys have not worked themselves into a corner and made it impossible to support any Presidential efforts to increase East-West trade."

The White House source referred to an AFL-CIO Executive Council resolution which attacked dealing with the Eastern bloc and Yugoslavia.

"There is no foundation to the myth," the document said, "that the expansion of Western trade will promote the liberalization of any Communist government or encourage the separation of the satellites from the U.S.S.R. These regimes are tied to Moscow by strong ideological, political, military and economic bonds. . .

"Their armies are part of the Warsaw Pact Organization. Their economies have, in large measure, been integrated into the Comecon, the Communist counterpart of the Common Market.

" . . . Tito's Yugoslavia, which has received over a billion dollars of Western aid has lately strengthened its economic ties with Moscow by associating itself with the Comecon. . ."

President Johnson is aware of all this and the inherent risks, a source close to him said during a discussion of labor's strong position. That's why Mr. Johnson decided to appoint a committee to study means of extending trade but avoiding any strategic help to the bloc.

"The President is convinced that East-West trade will have a disintegrating effect on the bloc," I was told. "It does not make sense from a economic standpoint to keep up the barriers. There are both economic and diplomatic reasons for opening it up. We punish ourselves diplomatically by cutting off certain sources of supply.

"One of the most important things about Yugoslavia is its ties with the West. Tito would hesitate to cut off those ties now solely for political reasons.

"Anything with disintegrating effect is important to the U.S. The President will discuss the issue fully with them and hope to swing them to our thinking.

"The full policy has not yet been determined and labor can help us with it by cooperating."

However, there is no indication that Mr. Meany and his colleagues will shift their position. They are positively opposed to dealing with the Soviet bloc without quid pro quos — such as the pulling down of the Berlin Wall.

And that's not likely to topple or be pulled down by either side.

A room that has distracting jigs and jags in its structural layout can be made to look well-proportioned with the right kind of wallpaper. Take, for instance, a dormer. You can give it uniformity with small geometrics or all over floral patterns.

Brighten Meals, By Serving Ham, Red Cherry Sauce

National Cherry Month is celebrated all during February with its many occasions for holidays.

With the cherry crop approximately 63 per cent larger than last year's, there's a big supply of cherries to go into pies, dumplings, turnovers, muffins, and particularly sauce, which teams well with a ham slice.

Ham slices cut 1 inch or thicker should be baked (roasted) or broiled according to widely known meat authority, Reba Staggs. An inch-thick ham slice broiling or one hour baking time in a 325° F. oven.

Roasting a ham slice will take less watching than broiling. It can be done while you prepare this delightful sauce.

Ham Slice with Cherry Sauce

1 smoked ham slice, cut 1-inch thick
Cherry Sauce

Place ham slice on a rack in an open roasting pan. Bake in a slow oven (300° F. to 325° F.) 1 hour. Serve with:

Cherry Sauce

2 tablespoons cornstarch
½ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
1 can (16 ounces) pitted, tart red cherries
¼ teaspon red food coloring

Combine cornstarch, sugar and cinnamon. Drain cherries, reserving liquid. Add enough water to cherry liquid to make 1 cup. Add liquid to sugar mixture. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and clear. Add cherries and food coloring. Cook until just heated through. Yield: 2½ cups sauce.

ANN LANDERS
Answers your problems

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a young bride whose groom cried on his wedding night because he was lonesome for his mother. Anyone who thinks that letter was a fake because such a thing just couldn't happen is lucky. I know how real it is because I married a man who had the identical problem.

When the minister finished the ceremony (this was 32 years ago) he said, "You may now kiss bride." My groom turned to me and said, "Later, dear, I can't kiss you in front of my mother."

The happiest days I knew were the eight months before my husband died. A psychiatric social worker had a long talk with him and pointed out that the Bible says a man should put his wife before his mother. He had never heard of this before. It changed our entire marriage relationship.

I don't know if this letter makes sense to women who don't have the problem, but maybe it is worth printing for the benefit of young girls who are going with Mama's boys. -- MUSKEGON.

Dear M.: The letter from that young bride produced a surprising number of responses similar to yours. I learn from my readers every day that the "unusual" is often pretty common after all.

Dear Ann Landers: Pop is 62 years old and has always enjoyed good health. Last year the doctor told him an infection in his system was caused by bad teeth and he urged Pop to see a dentist.

The dentist said Pop should have had his teeth extracted years ago so we finally talked him into doing it. Now we are having nothing but trouble. The new teeth cost a fortune and they look terrible. Pop says they don't fit and he refuses to wear them. The dentist has adjusted them three times and Pop says they are worse than ever.

Mom won't go any place with Pop unless he puts his teeth in. It's fight, fight, fight -- night and day -- and we don't know what to do. Please suggest something. -- AT WAR.

Dear At: If you bought two dozen eggs and discovered they were rotten would you use them anyway? Why insist the poor guy wear teeth just because they are paid for?

Take Pop to another dentist and start all over again. Don't force him to sulk in toothless silence. And going without those china choppers is very bad for Pop's general health.

Dear Ann Landers: Our nine-year-old son was sent home from school this morning. One teacher has been picking on Jordon since the beginning of the year. Jordon says he did nothing wrong and that the teacher is just plain mean.

I know my child is far from perfect, Miss Landers, but he has always told me the truth. I happen to know this teacher had a romantic disappointment last year and it turned her sour on life. I'm sure she is taking out her unhappiness on the children and I resent the whole thing. What sould be done about it? -- A MOTHER?

Dear Mother: When a child is sent from school in the middle of the day "For no reason," you can be sure there is a reason of some sort. Go to school and learn what it is.

You do your child no favor when you decide, without benefit of the facts, that the teacher is mean and your son is in the clear.

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "What to Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Poplar Bluff And Central Win

They Clash In The Finals Tonight

DEXTER -- Top-seeded Poplar Bluff fought their way into the finals of class L regional tournament here last night with a hard-pressed win over the fourth seeded Dexter Bearcats 66-49. Cape Central registered the first upset in the tournament by downing the second seeded Jackson Indians 71-54 with a hot-scoring second half.

Poplar Bluff (66)
Dexter (49)

This was the twentieth win of the season for the Mules opposed by three defeats. Their defense was stronger in this game than it has been in recent contests with their holding the Bearcats without a field goal until 4:45 was left in the second quarter. In the first period they outscored Dexter 14 to 3 and as first half play ended the Mules were out front 31-14.

Gordon McKee, high scoring star for the Bearcats, could manage only seven points last night to end his high school career. This seven points wasn't the best way to end a brilliant season, but he has more than carried the Bearcats on the offensive end of hardwood all year.

Ronnie Dunning paced the Mules through their workout with 20 tallies.

Cape Central (71)
Jackson (54)

The Tigers plummeted out to lead 18-11 in the first period and never lost their advantage from there.

Mike Bremmerman and Syl Johnson sparked Central with 23 and 25 respectively.

Sports Shavings

by Dan Whittle

Since the onslaught of the basketball season there have been many things occurred to teams. Some have had winning seasons, some losing seasons, and a few of those losers were among the most improved ballclubs on the hardwoods.

Take the Scott Central Braves. At the start and up until about the midway point the Braves were not given serious consideration by opposing teams. But by the time they got into the regional tournament they were drawing more than just glances. And for good reason. They went on to play four seeded teams and they dumped three of them to take down the third place trophy.

Let's view the Sikeston Bulldogs. They had their ups and downs all through the year. They started off by dropping their first two games before zeroing in on the win column against the Cape Central Tigers. It looked as if they just might be ready to really start the old ball rolling. Then the Jackson Indians came to town to end that by defeating them 52-51.

The season kept rolling along until they piled up five consecutive wins to push their record to 7-3. From there the Bulldogs dropped their last seven of eight games. But they kept plugging and by the time the Class "L" Regional at Dexter started they were being viewed cautiously. They all but knocked down the Poplar Bluff Mules in a surprising 64-61 verdict. Possibly the chief contribution to Sikeston's superb performance was their willingness to hustle and their desire to win. If they could have gotten through the Mules tough press in the second half, then it would have been good-bye Mules.

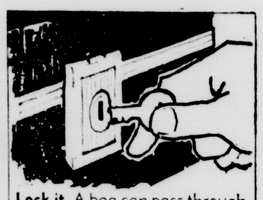

Dexter, like Sikeston, has a lot of youth on their club, including their coach. But don't let that fool you, they are as tough as can be. Adding to their toughness is the return of Rick Mooney. He played in the opening game of the tournament Tuesday night against the Charleston Blue Jays, but not in full duty. His absence was thought for a long time to be possibly resulting from the black birds that roost near Dexter. But from an unofficial source it has been reported that Rick is quite a dog lover and is allergic to many different things. His pet dog was removed and Rick has been feeling better ever since. Coach Jim Hall says, "After finding out about the dog incident I find it hard to find any love for them."

Watch Your Baggage!

Robert Shaw, head of the baggage transfer division of Allied Maintenance Corp. at Kennedy International Airport in New York, supervises the arrival, departure and interline transfer of 1.2 million pieces of luggage yearly for 21 airlines. He has some tips for air travelers--what the passenger can do to speed his bag to his destination.

Check it. Note clarity of your baggage tag. A busy airline clerk in haste may write an airline code to look like another. Example: United (UA), Viasa (VA), National (NA).

Lock it. A bag can pass through as many as 12 different hands in a high-speed transfer for a normal flight. Luggage bursting open could cause delay and a missed flight.

Tape it. Two pieces of reflective tape over the closure offer double protection against the bag accidentally opening. Makes it easier to spot at baggage pickup, too.

Name it. Initials alone are not much help if luggage strays. Tape your full name and address across the top, or put your business card under the handle.

Tote it. Carry in the cabin whenever possible fragile items and items such as aerosol shave cream. Strange things can happen in the plane's nonpressurized cargo space.

Ask questions. If transferring, make sure your travel clerk has allowed enough time for your luggage to catch up with you. At JFK, for example, 35 minutes may be needed from arrival to departure.

Managers Are Not Worried By Baseball

Spring training isn't even a week old and already worry lines are furrowing the brows of some managers.

Baseball isn't what's bothering the San Francisco Giants' Herman Franks, or Casey Stengel, patriarch of the New York Mets, or Al Lopez, skipper of the Chicago White Sox.

Franks is concerned by his waistline, Stengel is bothered by thieves and Lopez is worried about, of all things, the National Basketball Association standings.

Franks, rookie manager of the Giants, stepped on the scales at the club's Casa Grande, Ariz., training base and flashed a wide smile when the arrow pointed to 210 pounds. "I got it made," he grinned. "It will be a breeze from here on in."

Franks, who scaled 235 while coaching the Giants last year, has a bet with club President Horace Stoneham and other members of the Giant hierarchy that he can slim down to 200 by opening day.

Stengel, the Glendale, Calif., bank executive who spends his summers directing the Mets, got word from his wife, Edna, that three burglars were arrested after allegedly trying to break into the Stengel home.

The manager heard about the attempt at the Mets' St. Petersburg, Fla., camp. Stengel said he was relieved that nothing had been taken.

"I was afraid they had stolen that big oil painting of Yogi Berra," he said. "The gold frame is worth a lot of money. I value it at $20,000 in my head. It has great sentimental value."

Berra, the Mets' new coach, had no comment.

Meanwhile, the Mets signed Charlie Smith, leaving only outfielder Joe Christopher still unsigned. The Chicago White Sox inked pitcher Joe Horlen and are missing only hurlers Juan Pizarro and Dave DeBusschere. And therein lies Lopez' problem with the NBA standings.

DeBusschere, a promising right-hander who was 15-8 with Indianapolis last year happens to be a basketball player during the winter. In fact, he's the player - coach for the Detroit Pistons of the NBA.

Now ordinarily that would be much of a problem but this season the Pistons are making overtures at an NBA playoff berth. If DeBusschere's club makes it, his arrival at the White Sox' Sarasota, Fla., camp would be delayed considerably more than the week or two he usually misses. And that could pose a problem for Senor Lopez.

Claude Provost, Montreal's handy right wing, has personally shouldered the Canadiens into second place in the National Hockey League.

Provost, for years considered one of the league's top defensive forwards, has blossomed into a scorer and his 25th goal of the season Thursday night gave Montreal a 2-2 tie with the Toronto Maple Leafs. In the only other game played, New York came from behind and nipped Boston 4-3.

The tie gave the Canadiens second place, one point up on idle Detroit and left the Habs just two points back of first-place Chicago. Toronto, winless in the last five games, is fourth, five points back of the Red Wings and eight behind the Black Hawks.

Walt Wesley Is Lone Unanimous Choice All-Star

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY AP -- Walt Wesley, the 6-foot-11 Kansas pivot who wears Wilt Chamberlain's old KU number -13-was the only unanimous choice and Oklahoma State's Jim King was just four votes from unanimous on the Associated Press 1965-All - Big Eight Basketball Team announced today.

Hank Iba, 60-year-old Oklahoma State coach who reached a long-cherished goal, his first Big Eight championship, was named Big Eight Coach of the Year. He was a 2-to-1 choice over Iowa State's Glen Anderson.

Behind Wesley and the 6-foot-6 King, competition was close. Hard - driving 6-foot-3 Al Koch of Iowa State and 6-7 Chuck Guardner of Colorado were next in the voting. Oklahoma's 6-5 Jim Gatewood won the last spot on the first team by a scant four votes over Pat Frink of Colorado.

King and Gatewood are the only seniors on the first team, which is averaging 88 points, 44 rebounds, shooting .483 from the field and .708 from the foul line in league games.

Wesley made a run at Chamberlain's league scoring record of 28.3 set in 1958. His average shot up to 28.1 before the last two games. His current mark of 26.5 is third in league history behind Chamberlain and the 28.0 by Clyde Lovellette. Both were All America choices at Kansas.

King and Wesley rank 1-2 in field accuracy, King and Koch 1-2 in free throw accuracy and all but Koch rank in the first seven rebounders. Koch has a 17.3 scoring mark. Gardner 15.8, Gatewood 14.7 and King 13.6.

King is one of the best defensive big men in the nation. Wesley's shot-blocking, defense and rebounding all improved the last half of the season. Gardner, an A-minus student who came to Colorado on an academic scholarship, suddenly blossomed at the outset of the conference schedule.

Gatewood is the first Oklahoma player to make the All-Big Eight team in several years. He's an all-around standout.

Kansas State failed to place a man on the first team for the first time in a decade and didn't land a second - team berth.

Frink was the top vote-getter on the second team. As usual, the writers, sportscasters and coaches leaned heavily toward size in their choices. Missouri's Ned Monsees, a rugged 6-4 recruit from the intramural ranks who is tied for the league rebounding lead, is the second team's tallest man. The other second team members:

Bob Ziegler, 6-3 Iowa State sharpshooter and the league's No. 2 scorer at 18.9; Oklahoma State's clever playmaker and scorer, 6-1 Larry Hawk; and 5-11 Gary Garner, Missouri's little long - range bomber.

Al Lopes, Kansas, and Gary Hassmann, OSU, just missed the second team.

Frink was a solid choice for Big Eight Sophomore of the Year, polling more than the combined vote of Fred Hare, Nebraska, and Ron Coleman, Missouri, who tied for second.

WBA Title Fight Set For Tonight

CHICAGO AP -- Ernie Terrell and Eddie Machen, a couple of contenders hidden in the shadow of Cassius Clay, clash tonight in a 15-rounder for the World Boxing Association's version of the heavyweight championship.

Terrell, a 6-foot-6, guitar-strumming boxer who has won 12 straight fights, is a 12-5 choice over the 6-foot Californian, who was beaten in his last fight by former champion Floyd Patterson.

Promoter Irving Schoenwald is hoping for a crowd of about 7,000 and a gross gate of $60,000 for the International Amphitheatre.

The bout will be shown on closed - circuit television in several cities. There will be no radio broadcast. Fight time is 10:30 p.m., EST.

This is a title fight of sorts because the WBA stripped Clay of title recognition for signing a return match with Sonny Liston. This violated the WBA's rule against return title bouts without special permission. Liston was dropped out of the rankings after another one of his brushes with the law.

The WBA first named Terrell and Cleveland Williams of Houston to meet for the title. But Williams was shot in a scrape with the police near Houston and was fired out of the contention.

So Machen, who was ranked fifth after losing a 12-rounder to former champion Patterson at Stockholm last July 5, was boosted to No. 4 and into the title fight with Terrell. Now he is ranked No. 3.

New York still recognizes Clay, who meets Liston in Boston May 25, as champion. The British Boxing Board of Control considers the Terrell- Machen fight "little more than a joke" as far as the world title is concerned.

The European Boxing Union does not recognize Clay as champion but says the Chicago fight is nothing more than a preliminary since it holds the winner must fight Patterson.

Patterson, meanwhile, is itching for a shot at Clay and later with Liston, the man who knocked him out twice in the first round.

Terrell, 25, has a 36-4 record, including 18 knockouts. He was stopped once, by Williams in the seventh round at Houston, April 3, 1962. Since then he has swept to 12 victories and is No. 1 in the WBA ratings.

Machen, 32, has been fighting pro for 10 years with more ups and downs than a yo-yo. His record is 47-5-2, including 29 knockouts. His only knockout loss was in the first round by Ingemar Johansson in Sweden, Sept. 14, 1958.

Tale of the tape for the World Boxing Association heavyweight title fight Friday night between Eddie Machen and Ernie Terrell:

Key Injury Led To Semo Downfall

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- A broken ankle suffered by forward Thal Thrower, coupled with a failure to get the bir breaks and the big plays, led to the first season out of five that Southeast Missouri State College has failed to win the MIAA basketball championship.

The Indians, with a final record of 15-8, were 6-4 in the conference, tied for second with Southwest Missouri. Central Missouri, at 9-1, won this year's crown.

In a year-end assessment by head coach Charles Parsley, the turning point of the season was a broken ankle suffered by Thrower in a crucial game at Springfield.

Thrower, senior from Kennett, "was playing the best ball he had ever played," Parsley said. "We not only missed his height, hustle, and steadying influence, but worst of all his loss cost us all our reserve height.

"This hurt us in the important games at the end of the season, when our big men got in foul trouble, or when they needed rest."

Even so, Parsley felt, his squad was outclassed in only one game, against Arkansas State at Jonesboro. "That was the only game," he said, "that we didn't feel we could have won. In all of the other seven losses, a key play or break for us could have swung the game our way."

Parsley added that one of the main reasons for the success of his previous teams had been the ability to get the big play in crucial points.

"I was pleasantly surprised in the first part of the season," Parsley said. "We were having more success than I thought we would, and it looked like we might get another shot at the title. But instead of improving, we seemed to tail off after the end of January."

The SEMO coach, who said that morale and team spirit had remained high throughout the season, thought the thin line of balance had probably been tipped by the weakness caused by the loss of Thrower.

Although conceding a general lack of overal individual consistency, he said that he had been pleased with the play of his regulars and the improvement in a number of reserves.

Parsley was especially happy with the performance of sophomore forward Kermit Meystedt of Cape Girardeau, in his first season as a regular, and with that of guard Ron Hextell, Chicago junior, also in his first starting role.

Both return next year, along with starting 6-6 forward Tom Drexler, Maplewood junior, and with reserve forward Dwight Turner, of Clarkton, a junior, and reserve guards Ken Wilkerson, Fisk junior, Bill Bekebrede, St. Louis junior, and Jim Carter, Houston junior.

Drexler, a two year veteran of the starting lineup, averaged 10.7 points per game this season, good for fourth, and was third in rebounding at 7.2.

Gone next year will be the team's two leading scorers, guard Mike Gross of Maplewood and 6-7 center Jack Becker of St. Charles. Gross ended the season with a 17.5 average, while Becker had 14.3. Becker was also the leading rebounder with 10.4 per game.

No big rebounders appear to be in prospect from the current varsity or junior - varsity teams to replace Becker, although Turner, at 6-3, could break into the lineup. A preseason shoulder operation kept him from a true test under fire until late in the season.

Freshman Charlie Bertrand of Ilmo and sophomore Curtis Williams of Cape Girardeau, two guards who both saw limited action with the varsity, are considered good prospects for next season, as are Shelton Smith of Poplar Bluff and Norman Vanamburg, of Lutesville, both of whom saw action only with the jaycees.

The Indians could also get help next season from guard Steve Howell, sidelined by grades this semester, and from Pete Ulmer of Benton, who attended Austin Peay for one quarter before transferring here.

"Our biggest need for next season is big men on the inside to help Meystedt," Parsley said. "We'll be trying to concentrate on getting good freshmen, along with at least a couple of junior college transfers."

Interstate Highway Program Passes Halfway Mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction on the world's greatest highway program yet conceived — the 41,000-mile U.S. interstate system — is past the halfway mark and just about on schedule.

The program was set up by Congress in 1956 and 1972 set as the target date for completion.

It will consist of 41,000 miles of high-speed highways to connect the nation's principal metropolitan areas, cities and industrial centers and to serve as a defense network of roads if needed.

The system generally is designed to take motorists whizzing along without worries about intersections, traffic lights and jammed city streets.

Today, a little more than eight years after the program was launched, 19,018 miles are open for traffic; construction is under way on another 5,196 miles, while engineering work or right-of-way acquisition is in progress for another 12,103.

The remaining 4,680 miles in the system are listed by the Bureau of Public Roads as in preliminary status or not started.

Thus, about 89 per cent of the system is open or under way.

The bureau says the program is about on schedule and that completion in 1972 is possible. However, time is getting short for the drafting of plans for the unstarted segments, a spokesman said.

The pinch, he said, will be on segments in the urban areas — the roads designed to take traffic through, under or around cities. These portions of the system are costly because of the high value of the rights of way involved and frequently the routes are controversial.

When the interstate system was authorized by Congress it called for a network of 40,000 miles of highways to cost an estimated $28 billion. The mileage has been increased to more than 41,000 and the latest cost estimated by the roads administrator, Rex M. Whitton, is $46.8 billion.

The latest estimate represents a $5.8-billion increase over the estimate submitted to Congress in 1961.

Through 1964, a total of $21.7 billion had been spent on the interstate system, roughly $19 billion of it federal money and $2.6 billion state money.

The federal share is financed by highway users through taxes on gasoline, new trucks and buses, tires and tubes and the like.

Today's Spanish Lesson

By William Archer
Lesson No. 13

Reading time 5 min. Study time 5 min.

"Key" #5 -- Now we will give you another "key" to verbs. It is, 'tengo que', and it means, 'I have to' (as a duty or a necessity). It is pronounced 'TANG-go/k', How many times do you say, 'I have to go to class, to the hotel, to work, etc.?. In English, when you say, 'I have', it calls for a noun -- 'I have a book, job, money, etc.'. When you put the preposition 'to' behind 'I have', you make it necessity or duty -- 'I have to work, etc.'. The same is true in Spanish. If you say in Spanish, 'tengo' ('TANG-go'), 'I have', it calls for a noun the same as in English -- 'Tengo un libro', 'I have a book'; and when you add 'que' (pronounced 'K') to 'tengo', it is the same as putting the preposition 'to' after 'have' in English:

A) I have to
B) Tengo que
C) TANG-go/k
A) I have
B) Tengo
C) TANG-go
A) I have to go to my office.
B) Tengo que ir a mi oficina.
C) TANGO -go/k/ear ah/ me/ oh-fee-see-nah.

This is a very valuable "key", because you can use it as often as you do in English. 'I have' is 'tengo'; 'I have to' is 'tengo que'.

Now you can say 'I have to go, but I don't want to'. 'I am going to go -- I have to'.

'Work' is an essential word with 'tengo que'. It is, 'trabajar' (trah-bah-HAR):

A) I have to work.
B) Tengo que trabajar.
C) TANG-go/k/trah-bah-HAR
A) I want to play, but I have to work.
B) Quiero jugar, pero tengo que trabajar.
C) key - AIR - o/who - GAR/ PAIR - roe/TANG - gok/trah-bah-HAR.
A) I have to go.
B) Tengo quie ir.
C) TANG-go--k--ear.

You can easily see how this new "key" gives you tremendous latitude in Spanish. It is an interesting "key", particularly in view of the numbers of times you employ it in English every day.

The State Reorganization Commission of Missouri

DEPARTMENTAL REORGANIZATION

31. Recommendation:

That the Department of Public Health and Welfare be abolished and that each of the present divisions of the department, Public Health, Welfare, and Mental Diseases be given departmental status.

The Department of Public Health and Welfare is specifically provided for in the state consitution (Art. IV, Sec. 37). Since its creation in 1945, the department has consisted of three major divisions; public health; welfare; and mental diseases. The statutes adopted in 1945 and subsequent legislation over the years related to the department, however, have not created a 'paper' department with each of the three divisions in practice and by statute having a high degree of independence from the director of the department or from each other. The directors of the Divisions of Health and Welfare are appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Senate. By statute, the Division of Mental Diseases is under the general supervision of a state mental health commission. The Commission appoints the director of the Division of Mental Diseases for a term of four years.

The 1955 State Reorganization Commission recommended that the three divisions "be integrated into a functional department." This recommendation has not been adopted. Since 1955 each of the divisions has expanded and increased its programs and services. Although certain programs have required close cooperation among two or all three of the divisions (placement of patients released from state hospitals to private or nursing homes), the fact remains that the major functions of each division are distinct from the functions of the other divisions. For almost 20 years the fiction of a single department has been maintained despite the actual organization and functions of the three divisions. It would appear both logical and practical to establish each division as a department. In order to do so, two constitutional amendments will be required. One amendment will be needed to delete the section of the constitution which provides that there shall be "a department of public health and welfare" (Art. IV, Sec. 37). The other amendment would change the section of the constitution limiting the number of departments so as to allow for the creations of two additional departments (Art. IV, Sec. 12).

INTERDEPARTMENTAL COORDINATION

32. Recommendation:

That the proposed departments of Public Health, Welfare, and Mental Diseases establish joint coordinated programs for research, statistics, and data processing.

The present Divisions of Health, Welfare, and Mental Diseases each presently has separate units for the gathering and preparing of research data and statistics, and the programming and operation of data processing equipment. By consolidating their research data programs as well as their data processing equipment, more comprehensive and useful information could be made available to each department. A single, jointly - sponsored data processing center to serve the three departments could bring about economies in personnel and equipment.

DIVISION OF HEALTH

The state legislature has declared that it is "the general duty and responsibility of the Division of Health to safeguard the health of the people in the state. . ." The statutes specify that the division shall maintain the following bureaus. (1) Vital Statistics; (2) Laboratories; (3) Communicable Diseases; (4) Food and Drug Inspection; (5) Child Hygiene; (6) Public Health Nursing; (7) Tuberculosis Control; (8) Cancer Control; and (9) Dental Health. Other bureaus may be established as necessary.

The 1955 State Reorganization Commission recommended that the laws be changed by deleting specific reference to the bureaus and leave to the administrative discretion the number of bureaus essential to the performance of the Division of Health. This recommendation has not been adopted. However, a second recommendation of the Commission calling for a consolidation of the several bureaus into four units or sections has been carried out by administrative order of the director of the Division of Health.

The present organization of the Division of Health consists of the following four sections: General Services; Hospital and Technical Services; Chronic Diseases; and Local Health Services. Each is headed by a section director, and is under the supervision of the deputy director of the Division of Health. The director of the section of general services is also assistant director of health (administration). The deputy director also supervises four additional programs not assigned to any section: community health and training unit; program planning and development; health mobilization; and maternal and child health.

Reapportionment Plan Developed

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Senate has developed a plan to reapportion itself and let the House sweat out its own redistricting problem.

The Senate Apportionment Committee agreed unanimously Tuesday night on a resolution asking Gov. Warren E. Hearnes to use the present constitutional system. Under it he would call a bipartisan commission to set up new senatorial districts.

Hearnes said in a television interview Tuesday night he thought he would have the power to do this, but wanted the Senate to put it in a formal request.

A special three-judge federal court ruled last December both the House and Senate were malapportioned. It threw out the entire House redistricting formula because it calls for at least one representative from each county.

But it left intact the Senate redistricting machinery. It merely criticized the 25 per cent variation in population between existing districts.

This variation apparently could be corrected without much trouble if the governor called a new redistricting commission into being. He would ask each state party committee to submit 10 nominees to him. Then he would appoint five of each party to do the job.

The apportionment committee took no action on House redistricting.

Instead, Sen. Omer H. Avery, D-Troy, the chairman, said conferences would be held with House leaders to see how they want to handle the problem.

He said the Senate did not want to be in the position of forcing the House to accept outside ideas.

That would put the issue up to Speaker Thomas D. Graham, D-Cole County, who takes his fight against U.S. Supreme Court decrees to Washington Friday in an appearance before a House committee there.

Earlier he told the Supreme Court to go to hell but later apologized.

Graham is pushing for congressional action to call a constitutional convention so the states could set up at least one house of their legislatures on a basis other than population.

Missouri and about a dozen other states have passed resolutions petitioning Congress to act.

On congressional redistricting, also ordered by the courts, Avery said a preliminary bill making a few changes will be introduced soon.

Then it will be referred to a subcommittee for further study before a final plan is drawn up.

Bill To Exempt Physicians and Blood Banks from Antitrust Laws Introduced by Sen. Long

United States Senator Edward V. Long (D. Mo.) today introduced a bill to exempt physicians and non-profit community blood banks from the jurisdiction of the Federal antitrust laws.

"Our antitrust laws were meant to apply to economic and profit - making business activities, not to non-profit, medical services such as blood transfusion," said Senator Long in a statement prepared for use on the Senate floor.

Senator Long introduced a similar bill in the 88th Congress following Federal Trade Commission proceedings against the Kansas City Community Blood Bank and a number of area doctors. The FTC action was brought after two small commercial blood banks claimed that the community facility and Kansas City doctors were conspiring to prevent their sales of blood to patients needing transfusion. The first rulings of the FTC examiner have been against the community bank, finding the organization and associated doctors in restraint of trade. The full Commission has not yet handed down its final decision.

"Hearings on this measure were held last year before the Senate Subcommittee on Antitrust and Monopoly. They revealed widespread support for the bill from virtually the entire medical profession. Organizations endorsing the measure included: the American Medical Association, the American Association of Blood Banks, the American Hospital Association, and the American Public Health Association," the Missouri Senator said.

"Our antitrust laws were never intended to serve as the basis for actions against valuable, non - profit community medical facilities and service.

"Whole blood is a living human tissue. It should never be considered a commodity to be sold on the market like maple syrup," Senator Long said.

Elks Lodge is Chartered for Sikeston Group

A telegram just received by Joseph J. Bollinger, District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler of Missouri Southeast granting a dispensation for the institution of a lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in Sikeston, Missouri and plans are under way for institution on the 14th of March, 1965.

Franklin J. Fitzpatrick of Chicago, Grand Secretary of the Order, notified Mr. Bollinger, that Robert G. The telegram stated that the new lodge will be known as Sikeston Lodge No. 2319.

Mr. Fred Danner, Secretary and Mr. Raymert Miller, Treasurer of the Organization Committee at a meeting Sunday announced that 218 had paid the initiation fee for charter membership of the Elks Lodge at Sikeston. An initiation will be held as part of the institution ceremonies.

Ernest Wilson, Hank Switala, Bud Bates and Bill Burch, all on the arrangements committee are handling the tremendous job of getting all in readiness for the institution.

Mrs. Lonnie Standley, chairman for the observance of Girl Scout week March 7-14, has on her committee Mrs. Joel Montgomery directing the Appreciation Dinner; Mrs. Robert Mitchell, in charge of the distribution of tags throughout the week; Mrs. Gene Nunnelee, profiles on local Girl Scout leaders and their assistants; Mrs. Ed Matthews, store displays; and Mrs. Charles Conn, scout recordings for public announcements. Over 250,000 people in 130 countries bought an Opel Kadett last year.

Do they know something you don't?

Did you know the Kadett is made in Germany by General Motors?

Did you know it has bucket seats and a 4 speed floor shift and enough other standard equipment to make a lot of other cars look positively stripped down?

Did you know the sedan and sports coupe have trunks the size of real, honest-to-goodness trunks? And that the wagon has 50 cubic feet of cargo space?

Did you know there are Buick/Opel dealers all across the country that you can count on for parts and service?

Did you know you can buy a brand-new Kadett for the price of a good used car?

Well, now you know.

Those 250,000 people. They're still one up on you, though. They've actually driven a Kadett.

Are you going to let them get away with that?

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL at 27 years old, his age when he invented the telephone. March 3 was the 118th birthdate anniversary of Bell.

The 118th Anniversary of Bell, Inventor of Telephone

It's simple. Just pick up the receiver, dial a few digits and before long someone answers at the other end of the line.

The telephone is taken for granted in the modern world, but the vital communications link hasn't always been around. "The practical thinking and hard work of a man born 118 years ago March 3 resulted in phone service as we know it," said John Donoho, local Southwestern Bell manager.

"Alexander Graham Bell's first crude telephone was the initial step in bringing the world closer together in verbal communications. It laid the groundwork for almost unbelievable steps now being taken," Donoho continued.

Born March 3, 1847, in Edinburgh, Scotland, Bell did not set out to invent the telephone. "The telephone was the byproduct of Bell's scientific study of speech processes. His goal was to help the deaf speak," Donoho noted.

"As a scientist, Bell delved into a wide variety of subjects, and he made a number of lesser known, but also important, contributions."

When Bell was 23 years old, his parents moved from London to Brantford, Ontario, in an effort to improve his health. The move succeeded, and Bell began teaching a few months later in a school for the deaf in Boston.

Meanwhile, he continued experiments in electric vibrations, and his tireless work and imaginative thinking eventually resulted in a primitive instrument to transmit recognizable voice sounds.

Bell received the basic patent for his invention March 7, 1876, at the age of 29. He had worked out the principle of transmitting speech electrically at 27.

Use of telephones has since mushroomed. "It's hard to imagine what Sikeston's business and social life might be today without Bell's invention," Donoho said.

The manager points out that for more than 45 years after inventing the telephone, Bell lived a vigorous and creative life, continuing his unselfish service to the deaf and making the following contributions to science:

—Perfecting an electric probe used in surgery several years before discovery of X-rays.

—Working on a vacuum jacket having the same purpose as today's iron lung.

—Developing a method for locating icebergs at sea by detecting echoes.

—Working on various projects in aviation, including research in jet and rocket power. Bell's airplane, Silver Dart, was the first to fly in the British Commonwealth.

—Developing hydrofoils powered by aircraft propellers.

—Developing the Photophone, which made it possible for speech to be transmitted on a beam of light. This research led to later development of this optical maser.

Housewives Pickup Extra Cash by Aiding Bookmakers

NEW YORK (AP) — Police have launched a crackdown against housewives who use telephones to aid bookmakers and earn up to $100 a week.

Police Commissioner Michael J. Murphy disclosed Tuesday that 24 housewives have been arrested in seven weeks for operating illegal telephone answering services from their homes while hubby is at work and the kids are in school.

Murphy said: "We have driven bookmakers from the street, from candy stores and bars and grills, from conventional answering services, from hotel rooms and from ordinary wire services. We will spare no effort to root out this new development in bookmaking operations."

Police say the housewives pick up tax-free pin money of from $50 to $100 a week for their simple services. While making the beds, washing the dishes or vacuuming the rugs, they answer the telephone and take down a message from a $2-and-up bettor.

Murphy said the women don't actually take any bets.

The messages for the bookies may be something like: "Call Joe at such-and-such a number."

Periodically, the bookie calls the housewife and picks up his messages. He then calls the bettors, takes the bets and gives a fictional name for a housewife and a telephone number to call the next day for another round in the operation.

Murphy said some housewives have been handling calls for several bookies. Big volume bookies use more than one housewife.

Murphy warned that housewives performing such services were "aiding and abetting a criminal activity" and liable to a $50 fine and five days in jail.

Leo The Pet Lion

NORRISTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Leo the pet lion, center of a controversy between his owner, Howard Sautter of nearby Willow Grove, and the Abington Township Board of Commissioners, was on the winning side in court Wednesday.

Common Pleas Court Judge Robert Honeyman dismissed a complaint which sought to force Sautter, 54, to give up his pet.

The township, acting under an ordinance passed last December outlawing all wild animals, contended that Leo was a potential danger.

Honeyman called the township's complaint insufficient. He said there "must be allegation of nuisance — including, but not limited, to hazardous or dangerous activities to support the prayer for relief."

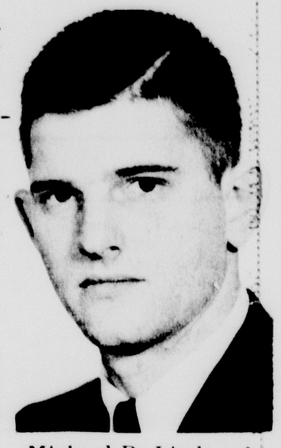

He gave the township 20 days to amend its complaint.

THE BIBLE

The Bible was written for all times, inasmuch as it contains the Organic Law of God which is immutable and everlasting. It also explains the operation of that Universal Law upon all created things, upon men and nations since the dawn of creation, nearly six thousand years ago.

And reaching out into the dim future it portrays the Divine Law applicable to man's ultimate destiny. It is a standard history of the World; and the perfection, grandeur and simplicity of literature and poetry. It establishes a close connection and means of communication between the Creator and Man.

It contains the only practical system of the science of Eugenics. It links in an unbroken chain the first man Adam, to the last man born today, or to be born hereafter as long as the world shall stand.

For eye hath not seen nor ear heard Isaiah 64:12, 1st Corinthians 2:9.

Legislatures may enact special laws, repeal or alter laws because they pertain to finite perishable human affairs, that requre conformity with altered conditions.

But the Divine Law is infinite, eternal, unchangeable, because it pertains to spiritual things which never change. It is a part of the Creator Himself, and any change in Him can not even be imagined.

Nations and men have sought to divert the fixed course of the Divine Law, but have gone down beneath the sands of the desert. That is the history of the past thousand years and it is constantly repeating itself.

Man must come to the Bible, a truism that will bear repeating. God established what are known and now considered as "Natural Laws" or "laws of nature" and will always permit them to follow out the designs for which they were established. The soul is of the highest importance -- "For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul." No man knows when the end of all things shall come. It is sufficient for him to know that his personal end will be be long in coming.

"Behold, I come quickly", says Christ, and to this may be added the words of the Psalmist: "For a thousand years in Thy sight, are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night." The Bible proclaims equality among men and shows their mutual relations, moral, social and political, and determines the conditions upon which to found the perfect brotherhood of man. It is vain for man to hope to find another way to eternity and no one knows when the last whisper of Time shall beat against the Eternal Gates.

SHOULD PAY FOR MEDICAL INSURANCE

Being one of the so-called Senior Citizens (65 or over), we certainly haven't anything against being guaranteed medical care in our old age.

We do object however, to placing half the cost on employers who are already paying unemployment compensation, half of the Social Security, and several other items, in addition to being charged with taking out of pay checks money for state and federal income taxes, insurance and health benefits and other costs. If the federal government enacts legislation providing medical care for the older folks, and we think it should, the payments should all come from the checks of those who will get the benefits, and not half from the employer who must pay all of his own Social Security.

One of the greatest problems the average employer faces is the fact that a worker tends to get the idea he is being paid only that which he can take home, since he never sees all the money taken out for the various required deductions. It results in dissatisfaction with their wages in some cases, and in others, greatly added costs for the operator of a business. Any business can stand just so much of a drain before it gets to the point where there is no profit, and as a result -- no business and no wages being paid. There lies a great danger in the half and half proposal for Medicare. -- Paris Appeal.

Rural Area Looks Like A War-Torn Battlefield

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — A rural home area near this peaceful northwest Louisiana town looks like a war-torn battlefield today.

Five homes are leveled, cars lie in melted heaps, and 17 persons are dead after a geyser of flame erupted from an underground natural-gas pipeline explosion Thursday. The dead include nine children.

"All Louisiana citizens mourn the terrible loss of life," said Gov. John McKeithen. "It is imperative that all resources at the command of this state insure that something like this does not happen again."

Tennessee Gas Transmission Co. officials said only a laboratory analysis might tell what ruptured its 32-inch pipeline.

The line, part of a 2,000 mile system channeling natural gas from South Texas to New England, is six feet below ground. It lies some 150 yards from the devastated row of modest frame homes.

The company said its division chief, W. C. McGee Jr. of Houston, Tex., was in Natchitoches —a town of 15,000 some 75 miles south of Shreveport — to assist survivors, including financial help.

Firm officials and State Police estimated damages to the homes, land, and pipeline at over $1 million.

The blast tore a 15-foot crater knifing 75 feet long and sent a fireball shooting 400 feet.

"I knew what it was," said Corbett Smith, who lives about 400 yards away. "The roar that followed was like a cyclone following. Then, the ground started quivering."

The flames soared for half an hour before Tennessee Gas crewmen could cut off the gas main.

The fire scorched five other homes and a sawmill one-quarter mile away. It turned trees into black sticks and seared the earth of all plant life in a 10-acre area.

"Bodies were scattered everywhere," said Deputy Sheriff D. W. Bryant. "Most of them were burned and charred past the point where you could recognize them."

Fourteen of the dead were from two families. In one house, the blast killed Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Rond, three of their children and three small grandchildren.

At a nearby home, the victims were the Rev. and Mrs. Jack Van Meter, their three small childre and Mrs. Van Meter's mother, Mrs. Lawson Antley, 47.

The eight members of the Rond family will be buried together after services today. A mass funeral for the six members of the Van Meter family will be held Saturday.

Funeral services will also be held Saturday for Mrs. William Ammons, 28, and her three-month-old son and Lewis Gilcrease, 44.

Eight persons were hospitalized, including William Ammons, husband of the dead woman, and two of their sons. Also hospitalized was H. G. Martin, his wife, and a son and daughter.

Police Chief Boyd Burr said the same line blew up in 1954. There were no casualties then.

Distributive Education Students Hosts Their Employers Thursday Night; Address by James R. Nelson

The members of the Distributive Education program and their employers heard an address by James R. Nelson, Jackson high school principal, in which he reminded student employees that three important factors, honesty, loyalty and courtesy are prime requisites in holding a job. Present were 43 guests including the employers.

The banquet and program were held last night at the Rustic Rock with employers as guests of their student employees. The welcome address was given by Kenneth Skinner, president of the high school D. E. program; the invocation was given by Doris Hammock, historian, with Billy Vaught introducing the speaker.

Entertainment was provided by Mark Henry, high school student, who gave a 15-minute program of folk songs, following the banquet.

JAMES R. NELSON, speaker at the Distributive Education meeting.

Mr. Nelson, a former Distributive Education instructor pointed out to the young employees the importance of giving their best to their employers who have given them an opportunity of earning as well as learning. Nelson said, "honesty and loyalty are the two most important factors in forging ahead. Show your employer that you are willing to take over a few responsibilities when he steps out and lets you in charge. Do not place all your concern in the amount of salary you receive because the advances will come when progress is shown."

"Courtesies are another important factor, the people you serve are entitled to them, and they in turn will assist you in improving your job, as well as an advancement in salary. I will also remind you employers that it is important for you to show your appreciation to these young men and women for a job well done, and assist these young students to learn how to do a good job better."

Await Federal Approval Before City May Start

DEXTER -- The Conservation Commission will underwrite one-thrid of the cost of mechanical destruction of a blackbird roost at Dexter, Director William E. Towell announced today.

The city is now awaiting final approval from the Federal Wildlife and Game Preserve Commission. The approval is needed since blackbirds are protected, and have made up a large portion of the roosting together with starlings and other birds. A large number of the birds have gone to the outer edge of city, where trees with heavier foliage are available, according to George McCracken, city clerk in Dexter.

Towell said the remaining two-thirds of the cost of the project will be borne equally by the Missouri Division of Health and by local participation.

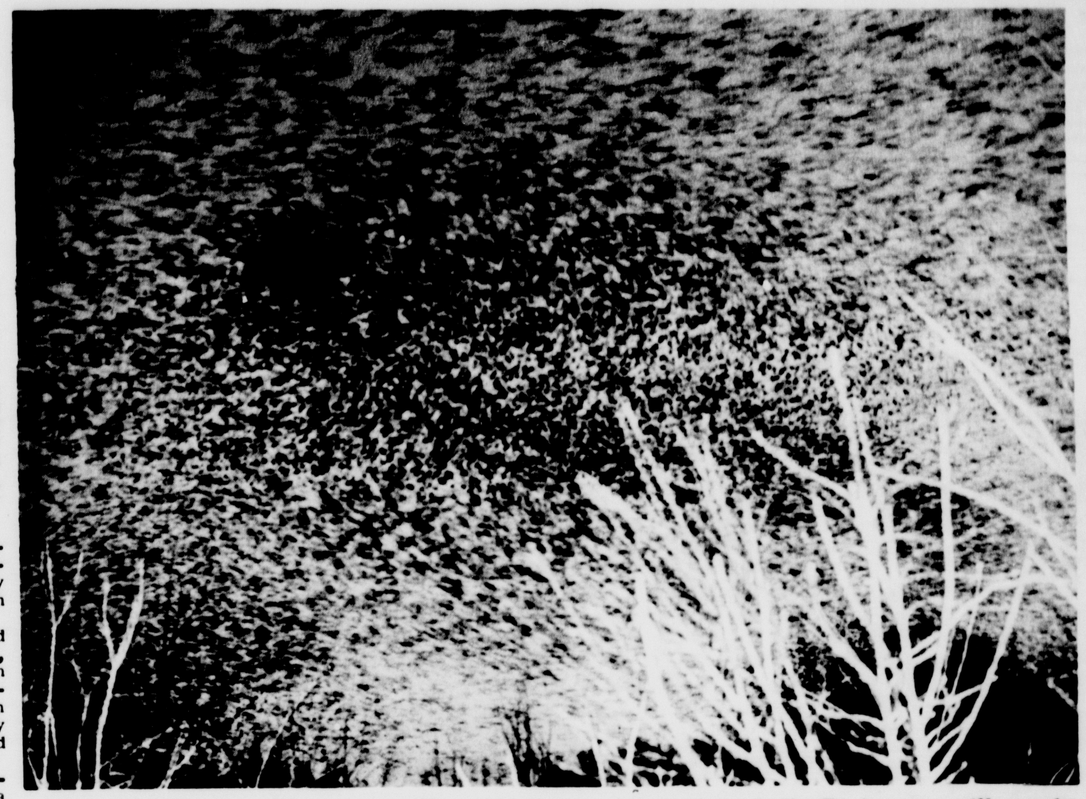

He said he had been assured by Dr. Henry M. Hardwicke, acting director of the Division of Health, of his division's participation and by Rep. Tom F. Baker of Stoddard County that a third of the cost would be borne locally.

Towell said the Dexter blackbird problem is not strictly a conservation matter, nor is it strictly a medical matter, but that he and Dr. Hardwicke felt immediate action on the problem is imperative.

He said the roost will be destroyed by bulldozers or other heavy equipment. The roost area is a region of 20 acres of low brush and scrub timber growth on the edge of Dexter to which millions of blackbirds of all local species returned each year. Residents of the area have been concerned about the supposed threat of histoplasmosis, a lung disease, being carried in the birds' droppings. Local physicians and veterinarians, however, have reported no cases of this disease in Dexter.

Towell said many suggestions --some of them wildly impractical--have been made for control of the birds. These have been deliberately avoided, he said, either because of their impracticality or because the suggested methods would involve the use of gas or poisons dangerous to humans, domestic animals and other wildlife in the area. He said the removal of the roost will be in the nature of an experiment.

There are now an estimated seven million blackbirds using the roost, Towell said, but only two percent of these are starlings, a bird which was believed earlier to be the bulk of the population. He said the other birds on the roost are redwing blackbirds, grackles, cowbirds and other species of blackbirds that winter in southeast Missouri. The seven million, Towell said, is in contrast to a population estimate of some 15 million birds on that roost two years ago.

HOW TO RID the almost ten million blackbirds and starlings in the Dexter area will soon be known, as soon as approval is given by the Federal Wildlife. The approval of the Missouri Conservation Commission has been received. This picture shows a portion of the birds as they are shown leaving a 20-30 acre roosting area in the southwest part of the city, located near a residential area, high school and factory area.

Land For New Baptist School Bought

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Land for the new Missouri Baptist College in St. Louis County was purchased Thursday.

Dr. Frank B. Kellogg, president of the college Board of Trustees made a $79,500 down payment on 80 acres of land which sold for $322,000.

Dr. Kellogg, who also is pastor of the suburban Maplewood Baptist Church, said the estimated total cost of land and buildings for the campus will be about $1,250,000. He said 43 different Missouri Baptist congregations already had pledged $627,324 of this amount.

The college is sponsored by the Missouri Baptist Convention and Southern Baptist Churches of the St. Louis area. The college, with a planned capacity of 500 students, will be a four-year co-educational liberal arts school.

The state already has granted the college a charter.

Five Killed In Light Plane Crash Near K. C.

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Five officials of a Santa Fe Springs, Calif. mobile homes firm were killed today when their plane crashed during a snowstorm.

The plane, which had taken off from Kansas City Municipal Airport, crashed in the Fairfax Industrial district here, just across the Missouri River.

The victims were tentatively identified as Howard Kohler, Lynwood, Calif., president of Biltmore Mobile Homes Corp., Ed Gessler, general sales manager; Edwin Mechsner, Glen Watson and Bob Hite.

The five were believed to have taken off for a return trip to California. They had spent the day Thursday at the Carrollton, Mo. plant of the firm.

The twin-engine plane hit one wing of a parked Constellation at the Fairfax airport and then crashed into a woven wire fence. The plane was demolished, but there was no fire.

Employes of industries near the scene said there was an explosion.

One of the men was believed alive when taken from the wreckage, but he was pronounced dead at St. Margaret's Hospital.

Banana Truck Burns Early This Morning

A banana truck, loaded with 550 boxes of Chiquita Brand may not deliver bananas "without a brusie on the inside" but its a cinch they'll be well cooked-at least most of them.

At 4:45 a.m. today the fire department was called to the intersection of Highways 60 and 61, south of town, when a banana truck of the Southern Shippers, Hattiesburg, Miss., caught fire. The driver, Bill Cross, of Steele, Mo., wasn't sure just how the load caught fire but the fire department thinks maybe it was one of the heaters in the truck.

At 2:15 a.m. today, the fire department was called to 420 Broadway, home of Jerry Halford family. A fire that started in the center of the house, cause, unknown, did considerable damage before it was extinguished.

Church To Be Moved To Westminister

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Marshall Sisson, an English architect, said Thursday the church of St. Mary Aldermanbury in London, which will be moved to the Westminster College campus at Fulton, Mo. this summer as the Winston Churchill memorial library and should be dedicated next year—the 20th anniversary of Churchill's "Iron Curtain" speech at the college.

The church, destroyed by fire in 1666 and rebuilt by Sir Christopher Wren, was bombed in World War II. But the exterior stone walls, bell tower and columns remain.

Sisson, the consulting architect on the project, said the church would be completely restored at Westminster College.

It will serve as a non-sectarian worship center and the library will house a collection of Churchill memorabilia.

The project was launched in 1961 through voluntary contributions. Sisson said preliminary work on dismantling the church is on schedule.

Families Plan Move Because Of Goldwater Loss

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two San Diego families who are moving to Australia because Barry Goldwater lost the last presidential election apparently already have something going for them Down Under.

Early Thursday, Robert Ansett, 31, sailed for Australia aboard the Iberia with his wife, their three children and a neighbor family.

Ansett explained that he made a bet with his boss, promising to go to Australia if Goldwater was defeated.

The $175-a-week bakery salesdriver said he was fed up with socialism in the United States.

His partner in the migration, Peter Kemmsies, 30, also is the father of three children.

But it developed after the boat had left Los Angeles that Ansett will be met in Melbourne by his father, Reginald M. Ansett.

The elder Ansett is described as one of Australia's richest men with a wealth estimated at $85.5 million in airlines, buses and trucks, television stations and 20 resort hotels and motels.

Man, Who Feared For His Life, Has Car Bombed

KANSAS CITY (AP)—A man who feared he was marked for death was killed by a dynamite bomb in his car Thursday evening.

He was John R. Simms, 51, secretary-manager of the National Electrical Contractors Association. He joined the association in 1959 after resigning as an official of the Electricians Union Local 124 (AFL-CIO).

It was the second bomb aimed at him. His suburban home sustained slight damage from a blast outside a basement window last Sept. 12.

Associates of Simms said he had expressed fear someone would try to kill him, and he had suspicions as to who it was but he could not put his finger on them.

"There were telephone threats before the first bombing, but none since," said Albert Thomson, Simms' lawyer and president of the city police board. "It had all died down. Nothing had happened for a long time. He did take precautions. He had his house lighted."

Death came in the basement garage of the association's headquarters building.

Simms, the last to leave the building, opened the garage door stepped into his car, and the explosion occurred.

A 12-inch hole was blown in the concrete floor under the car. A similar hole was torn in the top of the car. The interior was shredded, the doors and windows were mangled.

Police said the bomb was either under the seat or under the car and apparently was not touched off by the ignition switch. Discovery of a small battery and fine electrical wire indicated the detonator was activated when Simms sat down on the seat.

Light fixtures were broken in the garage. On the floor above, the concussion broke a glass panel door, blew heating coils out of the floor, cracked concrete walls and overturned a large flower pot.

George Trinastich, president of the association's Kansas City chapter, said he rode to lunch with Simms in the car, and police were told the garage door was locked all afternoon. The garage can be reached through an unlocked door from the first floor inside the building.

"Simms did not seem concerned at all at lunch," Trinastich said. "There were no labor negotiations in progress, or labor trouble. That has all been settled for three years."

Fred Atchity, an official of local 124 which has offices in the building, said he got his car out of the garage and went home about 15 minutes before the blast. He said Simms was shoveling snow off the sidewalk and was talking with an insurance man at the time.

The crack Metro police squad started an investigation.

A police guard was stationed at the dead man's home, where Mrs. Simms was being comforted by close relatives. There are no children in the family.

Denies Charges Of Overplanting Cotton and Rice In Arkansas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has denied coverup charges in the overplanting of rice and cotton acreage allotments in Arkansas.

The accusations were made Thursday in a Senate speech by Delaware Republican John J. Williams. He said such violations of the crop control program could cost the federal government a minimum of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

He said the department was trying to suppress a major scandal, and had refused to provide him information on the situation.

The department replied in a statement that premature release of such data could impair both administrative action by the department, and possible court action by the Justice Department.

It said Williams was advised of this on Feb. 18.

The statement also said:

". . . the department in its normal audit of programs discovered the overplantings and has been vigorously investigating them for the past several months. At one point, over a hundred investigators were assigned to the project. Department personnel were brought in from other states in order to do this intensive and effective investigation."

It said the investigations centered in 32 Arkansas counties and that widespread overplanting was found in five of them, with reports on two already completed and referred to the Justice Department.

Expanding on its privacy policy with regard to the cases, the department said:

"During these and all other investigations we have a duty to protect sources of information and the innocence of those who are falsely accused. To make available these reports where they might be made public would not be in keeping with this responsibility."

More than 450 Teachers to Have Discussion Meeting

Like every other phase of education in the "Three Rs",--readin', writin' and 'rithmetic-great changes in the methods of instruction have been made over the years and are still being made as educators seek newer and more efficient ways of teaching the younger generation.

Probably in the field of teaching reading there have been more striking innovations and changes than in most any other single phase of education.

A Regional Reading Workshop will be conducted from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday at the senior high school which, it is expected, will be attended by more than 450 teachers of reading and administrators from schools in Arkansas; western Tennessee, western Kentucky, southern Illinois and Missouri as far away as Columbia. Among this group of teachers will be 72 from the Sikeston school system.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. and then Lynn Twitty, superintendent of District R-6, the Sikeston schools, will make a short welcoming address and then the meeting will be taken over by three nationally known educators who will lead discussions on a variety of topics pertaining to the art of teaching reading.

Mrs. Bernice T. Clark, of Buffalo, N. Y., director of the Maryvale School System, will make what might be termed "the keynote address of the meeting when she speaks on principles and concepts of "Teaching Reading". This is the new phonetic approach to reading developed in England.

Otto McClintack, University City, Mo., reading co-ordinator of the University City Public Schools and J. Kendall Hoggard, of El Dorado, Ark., director of Instruction in the El Dorado City Schools, will also lead discussion groups.

Robert Miller, of the Sikeston schools, who made arrangements for the gathering reports that at noon the visitors will get their luncheons where ever they may wish to.

Other discussion topics will be "Programmed Reading using machines and devices," "Linguistics Approach to Teaching Reading" and the "Spalding Method of Teaching Reading."

Improvement Of Seed Topic For Gathering

The Missouri Seed Improvement Association held a district meeting last night at the Rustic Rock, with 20 seed dealers and extension agents from four counties present.

Joe Scott, extension field crops specialist at the Delta Center, discussed the crop varieties eligible for certification in this area. Crops discussed were, corn, cotton, soybeans, sorghums, wheat, oats, legumes and grasses.

W. E. Aslin, executive secretary of the Missouri Seed Improvement Association, discussed limited germinating certification to the growers to representatives from New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard and Scott counties. He added that there were 40,000 acres of certified crops in 1964. "We need to produce 10 per cent of the bushels to plant the yearly acreage of crops in Missouri. To do this we should produce 85,000-90,000 acres of certified crops in the state. Grasses are wide open for more acreage to be certified and produced in this area. There will be 200,000 pounds of certified Sunnit lespedeza seed available to be seeded this year.

Mr. Aslin stated that limited generation means limiting the number of years certified seed can be produced from foundation seed. On small grains this limited generation has been started in the fall of 1964. This is soft wheat being grown in this area.

Orders for soybeans are now being taken. Seed corn stocks are also being taken at this time for the 1965 season. For more information on growing certified seed in southeast Missouri, contact Don Lumsden, inspector and fieldman, Missouri Seed Improvement Association, Sikeston.

Await Federal Approval Before City May Start

DEXTER -- The Conservation Commission will underwrite one-third of the cost of mechanical destruction of a blackbird roost at Dexter, Director William E. Towell announced today.

The city is now awaiting final approval from the Federal Wildlife and Game Preserve Commission. The approval is needed since blackbirds are protected, and have made up a large portion of the roosting together with starlings and other birds. A large number of the birds have gone to the outer edge of city, where trees with heavier foliage are available, according to George McCracken, city clerk in Dexter.

Towell said the remaining two-thirds of the cost of the project will be borne equally by the Missouri Division of Health and by local participation.

He said he had been assured by Dr. Henry M. Hardwicke, acting director of the Division of Health, of his division's participation and by Rep. Tom F. Baker of Stoddard County that a third of the cost would be borne locally.

Towell said the Dexter blackbird problem is not strictly a conservation matter, nor is it strictly a medical matter, but that he and Dr. Hardwicke felt immediate action on the problem is imperative.

He said the roost will be destroyed by bulldozers or other heavy equipment. The roost area is a region of 20 acres of low brush and scrub timber growth on the edge of Dexter to which millions of blackbirds of all local species returned each year. Residents of the area have been concerned about the supposed threat of histoplasmosis, a lung disease, being carried in the birds' droppings. Towell said many suggestions --some of them wildly impractical--have been made for control of the birds. He said the other birds on the roost are redwing blackbirds, grackles, cowbirds and other species of blackbirds that winter in southeast Missouri. The seven million, Towell said, is in contrast to a population estimate of some 15 million birds on that roost two years ago.

HOW TO RID the almost ten million blackbirds and starlings in the Dexter area will soon be known, as soon as approval is given by the Federal Wildlife. The approval of the Missouri Conservation Commission has been received. This picture shows a portion of the birds as they are shown leaving a 20-30 acre roosting area in the southwest part of the city, located near a residential area, high school and factory area.

Land For New Baptist School Bought

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Land for the new Missouri Baptist College in St. Louis County was purchased Thursday.

Dr. Frank B. Kellogg, president of the college Board of Trustees made a $79,500 down payment on 80 acres of land which sold for $322,000.

Dr. Kellogg, who also is pastor of the suburban Maplewood Baptist Church, said the estimated total cost of land and buildings for the campus will be about $1,250,000. He said 43 different Missouri Baptist congregations already had pledged $627,324 of this amount.

The college is sponsored by the Missouri Baptist Convention and Southern Baptist Churches of the St. Louis area. The college, with a planned capacity of 500 students, will be a four-year co-educational liberal arts school.

The state already has granted the college a charter.

Five Killed In Light Plane Crash Near K. C.

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Five officials of a Santa Fe Springs, Calif. mobile homes firm were killed today when their plane crashed during a snowstorm.

The plane, which had taken off from Kansas City Municipal Airport, crashed in the Fairfax Industrial district here, just across the Missouri River.

The victims were tentatively identified as Howard Kohler, Lynwood, Calif., president of Biltmore Mobile Homes Corp., Ed Gessler, general sales manager; Edwin Mechsner, Glen Watson and Bob Hite.

The five were believed to have taken off for a return trip to California. They had spent the day Thursday at the Carrollton, Mo. plant of the firm.

The twin-engine plane hit one wing of a parked Constellation at the Fairfax airport and then crashed into a woven wire fence. The plane was demolished, but there was no fire.

Employes of industries near the scene said there was an explosion.

One of the men was believed alive when taken from the wreckage, but he was pronounced dead at St. Margaret's Hospital.

Banana Truck Burns Early This Morning

A banana truck, loaded with 550 boxes of Chiquita Brand may not deliver bananas "without a brusie on the inside" but its a cinch they'll be well cooked-at least most of them.

At 4:45 a.m. today the fire department was called to the intersection of Highways 60 and 61, south of town, when a banana truck of the Southern Shippers, Hattiesburg, Miss., caught fire. The driver, Bill Cross, of Steele, Mo., wasn't sure just how the load caught fire but the fire department thinks maybe it was one of the heaters in the truck.

At 2:15 a.m. today, the fire department was called to 420 Broadway, home of Jerry Halford family. A fire that started in the center of the house, cause, unknown, did considerable damage before it was extinguished.

Church To Be Moved To Westminister

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Marshall Sisson, an English architect, said Thursday the church of St. Mary Aldermanbury in London, which will be moved to the Westminster College campus at Fulton, Mo. this summer as the Winston Churchill memorial library and should be dedicated next year—the 20th anniversary of Churchill's "Iron Curtain" speech at the college.

The church, destroyed by fire in 1666 and rebuilt by Sir Christopher Wren, was bombed in World War II. But the exterior stone walls, bell tower and columns remain.

Sisson, the consulting architect on the project, said the church would be completely restored at Westminster College.

It will serve as a non-sectarian worship center and the library will house a collection of Churchill memorabilia.

The project was launched in 1961 through voluntary contributions. Sisson said preliminary work on dismantling the church is on schedule.

Two Traffic Accidents Thursday

Two of the five traffic accidents reported for Thursday in its 14-county territory by Troop E, State Highway Patrol, took place nearby. There were no fatalities and three were reported injured in the territory.

At 8:10 p.m. Thursday, the Patrol reports, in Chaffee on Highway 77, Forrest Wayne Tuttleton, 19, of Chaffee, made a left turn and a car driven by Argos Johnson, 29, of Vanduser, slid into the rear of the Tuttleton car. Johnson was taken to a Cape Girardeau hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

At 8:20 a.m. Thursday, the Patrol reports, a mile west of Dudley on Highway 60, Travis Riggins, 61, of Dudley, made a right turn. A car driven by Linda Ann Watkins, 18, of Long Beach, Calif.; skidded and hit the other car in the rear. No injuries reported.

Families Plan Move Because Of Goldwater Loss

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two San Diego families who are moving to Australia because Barry Goldwater lost the last presidential election apparently already have something going for them Down Under.

Early Thursday, Robert Ansett, 31, sailed for Australia aboard the Iberia with his wife, their three children and a neighbor family.

Ansett explained that he made a bet with his boss, promising to go to Australia if Goldwater was defeated.

The $175-a-week bakery salesdriver said he was fed up with socialism in the United States.

His partner in the migration, Peter Kemmsies, 30, also is the father of three children.

But it developed after the boat had left Los Angeles that Ansett will be met in Melbourne by his father, Reginald M. Ansett.

The elder Ansett is described as one of Australia's richest men with a wealth estimated at $85.5 million in airlines, buses and trucks, television stations and 20 resort hotels and motels.

Man, Who Feared For His Life, Has Car Bombed

KANSAS CITY (AP)—A man who feared he was marked for death was killed by a dynamite bomb in his car Thursday evening.

He was John R. Simms, 51, secretary-manager of the National Electrical Contractors Association. He joined the association in 1959 after resigning as an official of the Electricians Union Local 124 (AFL-CIO).

It was the second bomb aimed at him. His suburban home sustained slight damage from a blast outside a basement window last Sept. 12.

Associates of Simms said he had expressed fear someone would try to kill him, and he had suspicions as to who it was but he could not put his finger on them.

"There were telephone threats before the first bombing, but none since," said Albert Thomson, Simms' lawyer and president of the city police board. "It had all died down. Nothing had happened for a long time. He did take precautions. He had his house lighted."

Death came in the basement garage of the association's headquarters building.

Simms, the last to leave the building, opened the garage door stepped into his car, and the explosion occurred.

A 12-inch hole was blown in the concrete floor under the car. A similar hole was torn in the top of the car. The interior was shredded, the doors and windows were mangled.

Police said the bomb was either under the seat or under the car and apparently was not touched off by the ignition switch. Discovery of a small battery and fine electrical wire indicated the detonator was activated when Simms sat down on the seat.

Light fixtures were broken in the garage. On the floor above, the concussion broke a glass panel door, blew heating coils out of the floor, cracked concrete walls and overturned a large flower pot.

George Trinastich, president of the association's Kansas City chapter, said he rode to lunch with Simms in the car, and police were told the garage door was locked all afternoon. The garage can be reached through an unlocked door from the first floor inside the building.

"Simms did not seem concerned at all at lunch," Trinastich said. "There were no labor negotiations in progress, or labor trouble. That has all been settled for three years."

Fred Atchity, an official of local 124 which has offices in the building, said he got his car out of the garage and went home about 15 minutes before the blast. He said Simms was shoveling snow off the sidewalk and was talking with an insurance man at the time.

The crack Metro police squad started an investigation.

A police guard was stationed at the dead man's home, where Mrs. Simms was being comforted by close relatives. There are no children in the family.

Denies Charges Of Overplanting Cotton and Rice In Arkansas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has denied coverup charges in the overplanting of rice and cotton acreage allotments in Arkansas.

The accusations were made Thursday in a Senate speech by Delaware Republican John J. Williams. He said such violations of the crop control program could cost the federal government a minimum of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

He said the department was trying to suppress a major scandal, and had refused to provide him information on the situation.

The department replied in a statement that premature release of such data could impair both administrative action by the department, and possible court action by the Justice Department.

It said Williams was advised of this on Feb. 18.

The statement also said:

'. . . the department in its normal audit of programs discovered the overplantings and has been vigorously investigating them for the past several months. At one point, over a hundred investigators were assigned to the project. Department personnel were brought in from other states in order to do this intensive and effective investigation."

It said the investigations centered in 32 Arkansas counties and that widespread overplanting was found in five of them, with reports on two already completed and referred to the Justice Department.

Expanding on its privacy policy with regard to the cases, the department said:

"During these and all other investigations we have a duty to protect sources of information and the innocence of those who are falsely accused. To make available these reports where they might be made public would not be in keeping with this responsibility."

More than 450 Teachers to Have Discussion Meeting

Like every other phase of education in the "Three Rs",--readin', writin' and 'rithmetic-great changes in the methods of instruction have been made over the years and are still being made as educators seek newer and more efficient ways of teaching the younger generation.

Probably in the field of teaching reading there have been more striking innovations and changes than in most any other single phase of education.

A Regional Reading Workshop will be conducted from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday at the senior high school which, it is expected, will be attended by more than 450 teachers of reading and administrators from schools in Arkansas; western Tennessee, western Kentucky, southern Illinois and Missouri as far away as Columbia. Among this group of teachers will be 72 from the Sikeston school system.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. and then Lynn Twitty, superintendent of District R-6, the Sikeston schools, will make a short welcoming address and then the meeting will be taken over by three nationally known educators who will lead discussions on a variety of topics pertaining to the art of teaching reading.

Mrs. Bernice T. Clark, of Buffalo, N. Y., director of the Maryvale School System, will make what might be termed "the keynote address of the meeting when she speaks on principles and concepts of "Teaching Reading". This is the new phonetic approach to reading developed in England.

Otto McClintack, University City, Mo., reading co-ordinator of the University City Public Schools and J. Kendall Hoggard, of El Dorado, Ark., director of Instruction in the El Dorado City Schools, will also lead discussion groups.

Robert Miller, of the Sikeston schools, who made arrangements for the gathering reports that at noon the visitors will get their luncheons where ever they may wish to.

Other discussion topics will be "Programmed Reading using machines and devices," "Linguistics Approach to Teaching Reading" and the "Spalding Method of Teaching Reading."

Improvement Of Seed Topic For Gathering

The Missouri Seed Improvement Association held a district meeting last night at the Rustic Rock, with 20 seed dealers and extension agents from four counties present.

Joe Scott, extension field crops specialist at the Delta Center, discussed the crop varieties eligible for certification in this area. Crops discussed were, corn, cotton, soybeans, sorghums, wheat, oats, legumes and grasses.

W. E. Aslin, executive secretary of the Missouri Seed Improvement Association, discussed limited germinating certification to the growers to representatives from New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard and Scott counties. He added that there were 40,000 acres of certified crops in 1964. "We need to produce 10 per cent of the bushels to plant the yearly acreage of crops in Missouri. To do this we should produce 85,000-90,000 acres of certified crops in the state. Grasses are wide open for more acreage to be certified and produced in this area. There will be 200,000 pounds of certified Sunnit lespedeza seed available to be seeded this year.

Mr. Aslin stated that limited generation means limiting the number of years certified seed can be produced from foundation seed. On small grains this limited generation has been started in the fall of 1964. This is soft wheat being grown in this area.

Orders for soybeans are now being taken. Seed corn stocks are also being taken at this time for the 1965 season. For more information on growing certified seed in southeast Missouri, contact Don Lumsden, inspector and fieldman, Missouri Seed Improvement Association, Sikeston.

DEAR SOVIET WOMEN

Never underestimate the power of a Soviet Woman. On or before Monday, March 8 every candy store, every cosmetic shop, every establishment that sells anything of interest to women in the Soviet Union will be raided by husbands, fiances, and sons of all ages. For that is the date of International Women's Day, a kind of St. Valentine's day schmaltzed up, but with the saintliness austerely removed.

Soviet women are movers and shakers. Of all physicians in the Soviet Union, three-fourths are women, as Tass reminded its readers on Women's Day last year. About two-thirds of all economists are women (ah-hah), as are nearly half of all factory workers. The Supreme Soviet has almost 400 women members.

Last year Neues Leben, the German language supplement of Pravda, carried a front page salute to a seamstress who had earned the title of "Activist of Communist Labor," also to a laundrywoman, and a nurse. Tass insisted that the problem of equality for women did "not exist at all" in Russia.

The day has its less sober side. Georgian peasants fly in thousands of little bunches of blue, white, and pink flowers -- anemones, tulips, mimosas, snowdrops, and the yellow flowers Russians call the immortal - for sale in Moscow's Central Market.

All this is in keeping with a trend in the Soviet Union toward glamor. Marriages, once about as ceremonious as a trip to the meat market, are becoming more sentimental, and more and more couples are getting wed in wedding "palaces" instead of district registration centers. More and more brides wear veils and carry flowers. Civil marriage is still referred to as "registration" in the Soviet Union, but the woman who does the registering admonishes the couple of "safeguard your love."

FEDERAL REGISTRARS

The Senate Rules Committee is expected to make its recommendations on modification of the anti-filibuster rule by Tuesday (March 9).

VOTING QUALIFICATIONS for Negro voters in southern states are almost certain to be eased by Congress at the 1965 session, but questions of strategy remain unclear. Two of these seem to have a symbiotic relationship: Should Senate rules be changed to make cloture easier, and should federal action on voting be by statute or by constitutional amendment?

On the first of these, Senate majority whip Russell B. Long (D La.), a principal foe of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, recommends no change in the present requirement of a two-thirds majority of the Senate to cut off debate. Long on Feb. 17 told reporters that Southern legislators may not attempt to filibuster a voting rights bill this year. (He pointed out that Senate liberals themselves might need the filibuster weapon to prevent submission to the states of a constitutional amendment upsetting the U. S. Supreme Court's "one man, one vote" reapportionment decision.)

Long at the same time said that he would favor the use of federal registrars to enroll Negro voters in the South. Liberal Republicans and Democrats have been urging a federal registrar provision in the voting rights measure the Justice Department is readying.

FEDERAL REGISTRARS would have been provided by a bill offered by Rep. Henry Cabot Lodge (R Mass.) and passed by the House in 1891. It called for appointment of federal officials of both parties on election boards in any Congressional district upon the petition of 500 voters.

The bill was debated in the Senate for 46 days, at the end of which the majority attempted to put through a resolution for closure of debate by a majority vote. This resolution met even more determined opposition. A continuous session of four days without adjournment failed to break the filibuster. The proposal of a force bill was then abandoned, never to be taken up again.

Lodge, who was to make historic use of the filibuster himself after moving on to the Senate, wrote in 1893: "The only way in which proper rules for the transaction of business in the Senate can be obtained will be through the action of a party committed as a party to the principle that the majority must rule, and that the parliamentary methods of the Senate must conform to that principle."

Calvin Coolidge in his second annual message to Congress made a cryptic reference to the need for federal registrars. "I am of the opinion," Coolidge wrote, "that the national laws governing the choice of Congress should be extended to include appropriate representation of the respective parties at the ballot box and equality of representation of the respective parties at the ballot box and equality of representation on the various registration boards, wherever they exist."

A GROUP OF 31 Republicans -- five governors, four senators, and 22 representatives -- is urging the use of federal registrars in a statutory adjustment of voter qualification. Sen. Long on Feb. 17 and again in a television interview on Feb. 28 indicated that the federal government had "the right and duty" to intervene in cases of registration under the 15th Amendment.

President Johnson in his State of the Union Message pledged the elimination of "every remaining obstacle to the right and the opportunity to vote." The new amenity of Sen. Long and other senators for whom he speaks that pledge appear to be redeemable.

ONE WORD DID IT

A newspaper publisher in the game a long time told how one word made a difference in an ad.

Seems that a person was headed out west from a midwest city. He wanted one of the family cars driven to the coast, and inserted this ad--

"Owner wants car driven to west coast. Will pay all expenses."

The ad didn't bring any response.

Finally, he changed one word in the ad and the responses poured in. The one word he changed was "Cadillac" for "car."

Perhaps you need to change one word in your advertising copy.

Think about it.

Carbon black -- a sophisticated "cousin" to that unpopular substance, soot -- is one of the most useful products of modern industry, according to an article in Petroleum Today. It is used to strengthen and toughen rubber tires, raincoats and conveyor belts, and goes into bowling balls, typewriter ribbons, eyebrow pencils, television tubes and printer's ink. Its particles are so tiny that the period at the end of a sentence in ordinary printed matter contains nearly one billion particles of carbon black.

NEW YORK (AP) — Well, they're at it again.

"They" are the office cleanliness brigade who keep spotless desks themselves and want everybody else to keep a neat desk, too.

You find these ataxiophobes and amathophobes in every office.

An ataxiophobe is a person with a morbid dread of disorder.

An amathophobe is a person with a morbid dread of dust.

Their motto is, "every paper clip has its place — let's put it there."

They don't have blood in their veins. If you screwed off their heads and turned them upside down, detergent would run out.

Squads of these self-appointed janitors, these memo-pad Mussolinis, have been going by my littered desk lately murmuring things like:

"He's gone too far."

"Really, he's giving the place a bad name."

"It looks like the city dump. I think I saw a rat run out of it yesterday."

Then they go back to their own spotless desks, brushing at their clothing as if they had become contaminated, and spend the rest of the day cleaning their fingernails. They drop anonymous notes in the office suggestion box complaining my desk has become a public health menace.

Well, I say, to hell with all such neurotic nice-Nellies. If they want to clean up something, why don't they clean up City Hall?

What do I care if they call me "the Mayor of Germ Harbor?"

A man's desk should have a worked-in look, just as his home should have a lived-in look. It should bear the signature of his toil and dreams.

I feel a sense of pity when I see an office full of shining desks, their tops as barren of signs of human life as so many dunes in a desert. They seem so meaningless.

Who works at these desks? A number of nameless moles? Their desks show no evidence of belonging to anybody. Maybe they are manned by faceless automatons. Who cares?

I take pride in the condition of my desk. The two-foot pile of debris on it — which also has overflowed an adjoining bookcase, two windows and three file cabinets — took me as long to accumulate as it did the Pharaoh Cheops to build his great Pyramid. But my memorial is just as distinctive in its small way as his.

No one could mistake his pyramid for any other; no one could mistake my desk for any other.

CONGRESS IS URGED TO ADOPT BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT AIDS

The National Association of Manufacturers has urged Congress to adopt economic policies that would encourage American industry to expand its investment in jobcreating activities.

This in turn, the NAM said, would provide a practical solution for the employment problems of Appalachia, as well as for the other lagging regions.

In a statement filed with the Senate Committee on Public Works, the Association recommended economy in federal spending and further tax reduction to improve business incentives and increase funds available for private investment.

"In dealing with the problems of poverty throughout the country the need is for policies which will remove the barriers to economic growth in the productive, private sector of the economu," the NAM said.

Another major objective, according to the association, should be more widespread use of the proven principles of voluntary cooperation -- self-help programs which are accomplishing excellent results in many parts of the country.

Rather than turning to massive government spending programs, the NAM said the nation should seek wider application of practical, workable retraining and re-education programs and community self-help projects that individual companies and communities are using every day to solve local problems.

Almost every motorist who has driven out of his own state has encountered considerable differences in laws and ordinances. With them often came misunderstanding, unintentional law violations and accidents.

The need for agreement on uniform traffic laws has grown with increased interstate motor vehicle travel. Out of this need developed the Uniform Vehicle Code, which is a guide for states. Since its inception in 1926, the Code has been periodically reviewed. Changes have been made where warranted on the basis of its past practical operation and because of new developments in motor vehicle traffic.

At the present time there is a substantial degree of non-uniformity between Missouri traffic laws and the Uniform Vehicle Code in the area of traffic law commonly referred to as "Rules of the Road." These rules of the road deal with those regulations which govern the actions of all drivers and pedestrians.

The Interim Committee on uniform traffic laws has proposed for consideration by the 73rd Missouri General Assembly, a safety bill that would adopt much of the Uniform Motor Vehicle Code with respect to its rules of the road.

Colonel Hugh H. Waggoner, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, declared, "The rapid increase of highways, vehicles and drivers, together with the growing trend toward more interstate travel, stresses the need for sound, uniform rules of the road to govern the actions of drivers and pedestrians where ever they might be.

"I earnestly hope the bill proposed by the Interim Committee will be adopted. The removal of motorists' doubts in such matters of right-of-way, passing and the execution of turns, will better enable motorists to know and obey the rules, regardless of where they travel. It will also make for a more efficient flow of traffic and help reduce the danger of accidents," the Colonel concluded.

DOOM-CRIERS

Thoughtful friends of freedom take pride in calling themselves "constructive." But they need to show if the name fits.

There are too many doom-criers on the freedom side today. The many dangers they point to are great and real. But it is not enough to tell people what is wrong. They must be shown what is right. Otherwise, the predicted doom will come no matter how many warnings are given.

Nearly every patriot knows of far more which should be done than he has any time to do. Nearly every one knows of far more that is wrong than he can possibly put right. But so long as patriots concentrate on telling each other how bad things are, even some of their best friends will begin to dread the moment when they come in sight.

Every informed believer in freedom knows the peril in which we stand today. He does not need to be constantly reminded of that. But he does need guidance in constructive action. People in general need to know far more than they do about the joys and rewards which freedom brings.

It is not even enough simply to say that freedom is good. We must show why Freedom is good, and then more and more people will be inspired to seek it. If we cannot put our country on the right course, at once, we certainly should explain far better than we have yet, just what that course ought to be.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — An unreported human drama took place last weekend at the White House. President Johnson learned that Dr. Gordon Seagrave, the famed Burma surgeon, might be dying and that his son couldn't raise enough money to fly to his bedside in Burma.

Sterling Seagrave, after receiving a cable that his father had collapsed, could scrape up only enough money for a one-way ticket. However, Burma won't admit a visitor who hasn't the means to pay his way home.

In desperation, the son appealed to the State Department for the possibility of government transportation, but its bureaucrats seemed more concerned about red tape than a mission of mercy. No one wanted to waive the regulations against free transportation for non-government civilians.

As a last hope, Seagrave tried the White House. He described his problem to McGeorge Bundy's office, which tried to arrange transportation for him at the Pentagon.

The Burma surgeon, a fourth-generation American missionary who studied medicine at Johns Hopkins University, has devoted his life to helping people. But no one at the Defense Department wanted to stick his neck out to help the good doctor have a last visit with his son.

Finally, Bundy called the problem to the President's attention. Without hesitation, Johnson overruled the bureaucrats. Travel orders were issued to Sterling Seagrave to fly to Burma on the first available Air Force plane.

President Johnson has been searching for a tough Republican to appoint to the Federal Communications Commission. He wants one who will stand up to the networks, not bow abjectly as so many commissioners have in the past. He is anxious to improve children's programs, discourage the crime thrillers and violence which the Senate Juvenile Delinquency Committee criticizes as harming the youth of the nation.

Despite the President's attempt, likeable, gullible Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., has made himself the Senate pressure agent for the networks in trying to scare the FCC away from its probe of network-owned TV programs.

What the charming Senator from Indiana apparently doesn't know is that this is where the real TV gravy lies — and some of the secret payoffs.

To get a program on the network, independent producers frequently are told that the network will take over, act as producer, thus get not only the profit from selling the time to the sponsor, but the profit from producing the show. What sometimes also happens is that the independent has to sweeten the pot with a little private payola on the side somewhere down the line.

—TV MONOPOLY—

Out in Indiana, the state which sent Hartke to the Senate, there is widespread sentiment against the closed shop. But Indiana's man in Washington has lined up vigorously on the side of the closed shop for the TV networks. When Time and Life magazines invested $1,800,000 in Robert Drew and Associates production of ten unique films, they could not get one of them on the two major networks. One, called "Primary", showing the 1960 primary battle between Hubert Humphrey and John F. Kennedy, was finally aired on ABC, together with another, "Yankee, No," the story of anti-Americanism in Latin America.

But despite the prestige of TIME-Life and the investment of $1,800,000, the other eight TV films had to be shopped around to independents.

Some years ago, the Justice Department under Thurman Arnold broke up the major motion picture producers' practice of owning their own theatres on the ground that it both detracted from the quality of motion pictures and restrained independent producers from showing their product. Since then, the quality of motion pictures has increased.

However, the TV networks have got away with exactly the same monopoly in picking programs for their prime time at night. Like the motion picture theatre owners in the old days, they produce the shows they are going to show. Chief difference is that the medium through which they show them is owned by the public while the theatre owners owned their own theatres. Despite this, the gullible Senator from Indiana wants to scare the FCC away from even investigating a situation which it would have cracked down on years ago.

Note — What President Johnson wants is to find a new FCC Republican who won't put his tail between his legs anytime Sen. Hartke or Rep. Walter Rogers of Texas, also an FCC pressure man, says "Boo!"

Sharp Differences Develop Between LBJ, Labor Chiefs Over Expansion of Trade with Soviet Bloc

WASHINGTON, D.C. — For the first time there are "sharp differences" between President Johnson and his friends in labor's high command, it can be reported on the highest authority.

Imminent is a clash over the White House policy of pushing for expansion of trade with the Soviets and the Eastern bloc of so-called people's republics.

Mr. Johnson, who believes the cold war cannot be fought with rifles and bombers, thinks increased business with the Soviet bloc will disintegrate it.

Goerge Meany — "Mr. Labor" — and many of those around him believe that business, economic, political, diplomatic, credit, and scientific agreements with the Eastern bloc are "worthless" and will simply strengthen the Communist coalition.

Much to the chagrin of Mr. Johnson, the national AFL-CIO Executive Council said so publicly during its mid-winter session in Bal Harbour, Fla. last week.

Mr. Johnson does not understand why the labor leaders chose this moment to attack what he considers one of his most vital international policies.

He is also puzzled by some of labor's public demands on certain domestic issues — demands which he believes are "impractical" and put him on the spot at this time. They call for hiking the national minimum wage to $80 a week and for spending additional billions on public works.

What intrigued the President was Mr. Meany's public announcement that he would seek an appointment with the President to lay these demands before him. Mr. Meany never has had any difficulty in obtaining an appointment.

Usually this is quietly sought and easily obtained. The Meany statement in Florida made it appear that Mr. Johnson is hard to deal with and this reportedly nettled the chief executive.

But what stirred him most in the flow of reports from the AFL-CIO Executive Council Session is labor's attitude towards expanded East-West trade.

One White House source in intimate daily contact with Mr. Johnson said the President is giving this very careful study. The source added that he hoped the labor leaders had not worked themselves into a corner on this issue.

"The President wants the labor movement to approach this problem of East-West trade intelligently and practically," it was said, "rather than adopt a blind oppositionist attitude.

"We will have to take a good look at the resolution passed by the AFL-CIO council and hope the boys have not worked themselves into a corner and made it impossible to support any Presidential efforts to increase East-West trade."

The White House source referred to an AFL-CIO Executive Council resolution which attacked dealing with the Eastern bloc and Yugoslavia.

"There is no foundation to the myth," the document said, "that the expansion of Western trade will promote the liberalization of any Communist government or encourage the separation of the satellites from the U.S.S.R. These regimes are tied to Moscow by strong ideological, political, military and economic bonds. . .

"Their armies are part of the Warsaw Pact Organization. Their economies have, in large measure, been integrated into the Comecon, the Communist counterpart of the Common Market.

" . . . Tito's Yugoslavia, which has received over a billion dollars of Western aid has lately strengthened its economic ties with Moscow by associating itself with the Comecon. . ."

President Johnson is aware of all this and the inherent risks, a source close to him said during a discussion of labor's strong position. That's why Mr. Johnson decided to appoint a committee to study means of extending trade but avoiding any strategic help to the bloc.

"The President is convinced that East-West trade will have a disintegrating effect on the bloc," I was told. "It does not make sense from a economic standpoint to keep up the barriers. There are both economic and diplomatic reasons for opening it up. We punish ourselves diplomatically by cutting off certain sources of supply.

"One of the most important things about Yugoslavia is its ties with the West. Tito would hesitate to cut off those ties now solely for political reasons.

"Anything with disintegrating effect is important to the U.S. The President will discuss the issue fully with them and hope to swing them to our thinking.

"The full policy has not yet been determined and labor can help us with it by cooperating."

However, there is no indication that Mr. Meany and his colleagues will shift their position. They are positively opposed to dealing with the Soviet bloc without quid pro quos — such as the pulling down of the Berlin Wall.

And that's not likely to topple or be pulled down by either side.

DEAR SOVIET WOMEN

Never underestimate the power of a Soviet Woman. On or before Monday, March 8 every candy store, every cosmetic shop, every establishment that sells anything of interest to women in the Soviet Union will be raided by husbands, fiances, and sons of all ages. For that is the date of International Women's Day, a kind of St. Valentine's day schmaltzed up, but with the saintliness austerely removed.

Soviet women are movers and shakers. Of all physicians in the Soviet Union, three-fourths are women, as Tass reminded its readers on Women's Day last year. About two-thirds of all economists are women (ah-hah), as are nearly half of all factory workers. The Supreme Soviet has almost 400 women members.

Last year Neues Leben, the German language supplement of Pravda, carried a front page salute to a seamstress who had earned the title of "Activist of Communist Labor," also to a laundrywoman, and a nurse. Tass insisted that the problem of equality for women did "not exist at all" in Russia.

The day has its less sober side. Georgian peasants fly in thousands of little bunches of blue, white, and pink flowers -- anemones, tulips, mimosas, snowdrops, and the yellow flowers Russians call the immortal - for sale in Moscow's Central Market.

All this is in keeping with a trend in the Soviet Union toward glamor. Marriages, once about as ceremonious as a trip to the meat market, are becoming more sentimental, and more and more couples are getting wed in wedding "palaces" instead of district registration centers. More and more brides wear veils and carry flowers. Civil marriage is still referred to as "registration" in the Soviet Union, but the woman who does the registering admonishes the couple of "safeguard your love."

FEDERAL REGISTRARS

The Senate Rules Committee is expected to make its recommendations on modification of the anti-filibuster rule by Tuesday (March 9).

VOTING QUALIFICATIONS for Negro voters in southern states are almost certain to be eased by Congress at the 1965 session, but questions of strategy remain unclear. Two of these seem to have a symbiotic relationship: Should Senate rules be changed to make cloture easier, and should federal action on voting be by statute or by constitutional amendment?

On the first of these, Senate majority whip Russell B. Long (D La.), a principal foe of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, recommends no change in the present requirement of a two-thirds majority of the Senate to cut off debate. Long on Feb. 17 told reporters that Southern legislators may not attempt to filibuster a voting rights bill this year. (He pointed out that Senate liberals themselves might need the filibuster weapon to prevent submission to the states of a constitutional amendment upsetting the U. S. Supreme Court's "one man, one vote" reapportionment decision.)

Long at the same time said that he would favor the use of federal registrars to enroll Negro voters in the South. Liberal Republicans and Democrats have been urging a federal registrar provision in the voting rights measure the Justice Department is readying.

FEDERAL REGISTRARS would have been provided by a bill offered by Rep. Henry Cabot Lodge (R Mass.) and passed by the House in 1891. It called for appointment of federal officials of both parties on election boards in any Congressional district upon the petition of 500 voters.

The bill was debated in the Senate for 46 days, at the end of which the majority attempted to put through a resolution for closure of debate by a majority vote. This resolution met even more determined opposition. A continuous session of four days without adjournment failed to break the filibuster. The proposal of a force bill was then abandoned, never to be taken up again.

Lodge, who was to make historic use of the filibuster himself after moving on to the Senate, wrote in 1893: "The only way in which proper rules for the transaction of business in the Senate can be obtained will be through the action of a party committed as a party to the principle that the majority must rule, and that the parliamentary methods of the Senate must conform to that principle."

Calvin Coolidge in his second annual message to Congress made a cryptic reference to the need for federal registrars. "I am of the opinion," Coolidge wrote, "that the national laws governing the choice of Congress should be extended to include appropriate representation of the respective parties at the ballot box and equality of representation of the respective parties at the ballot box and equality of representation on the various registration boards, wherever they exist."

A GROUP OF 31 Republicans -- five governors, four senators, and 22 representatives -- is urging the use of federal registrars in a statutory adjustment of voter qualification. Sen. Long on Feb. 17 and again in a television interview on Feb. 28 indicated that the federal government had "the right and duty" to intervene in cases of registration under the 15th Amendment.

President Johnson in his State of the Union Message pledged the elimination of "every remaining obstacle to the right and the opportunity to vote." The new amenity of Sen. Long and other senators for whom he speaks that pledge appear to be redeemable.

ONE WORD DID IT

A newspaper publisher in the game a long time told how one word made a difference in an ad.

Seems that a person was headed out west from a midwest city. He wanted one of the family cars driven to the coast, and inserted this ad--

"Owner wants car driven to west coast. Will pay all expenses."

The ad didn't bring any response.

Finally, he changed one word in the ad and the responses poured in. The one word he changed was "Cadillac" for "car."

Perhaps you need to change one word in your advertising copy.

Think about it.

Carbon black -- a sophisticated "cousin" to that unpopular substance, soot -- is one of the most useful products of modern industry, according to an article in Petroleum Today. It is used to strengthen and toughen rubber tires, raincoats and conveyor belts, and goes into bowling balls, typewriter ribbons, eyebrow pencils, television tubes and printer's ink. Its particles are so tiny that the period at the end of a sentence in ordinary printed matter contains nearly one billion particles of carbon black.

NEW YORK (AP) — Well, they're at it again.

"They" are the office cleanliness brigade who keep spotless desks themselves and want everybody else to keep a neat desk, too.

You find these ataxiophobes and amathophobes in every office.

An ataxiophobe is a person with a morbid dread of disorder.

An amathophobe is a person with a morbid dread of dust.

Their motto is, "every paper clip has its place — let's put it there."

They don't have blood in their veins. If you screwed off their heads and turned them upside down, detergent would run out.

Squads of these self-appointed janitors, these memo-pad Mussolinis, have been going by my littered desk lately murmuring things like:

"He's gone too far."

"Really, he's giving the place a bad name."

"It looks like the city dump. I think I saw a rat run out of it yesterday."

Then they go back to their own spotless desks, brushing at their clothing as if they had become contaminated, and spend the rest of the day cleaning their fingernails. They drop anonymous notes in the office suggestion box complaining my desk has become a public health menace.

Well, I say, to hell with all such neurotic nice-Nellies. If they want to clean up something, why don't they clean up City Hall?

What do I care if they call me "the Mayor of Germ Harbor?"

A man's desk should have a worked-in look, just as his home should have a lived-in look. It should bear the signature of his toil and dreams.

I feel a sense of pity when I see an office full of shining desks, their tops as barren of signs of human life as so many dunes in a desert. They seem so meaningless.

Who works at these desks? A number of nameless moles? Their desks show no evidence of belonging to anybody. Maybe they are manned by faceless automatons. Who cares?

I take pride in the condition of my desk. The two-foot pile of debris on it — which also has overflowed an adjoining bookcase, two windows and three file cabinets — took me as long to accumulate as it did the Pharaoh Cheops to build his great Pyramid. But my memorial is just as distinctive in its small way as his.

No one could mistake his pyramid for any other; no one could mistake my desk for any other.

CONGRESS IS URGED TO ADOPT BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT AIDS

The National Association of Manufacturers has urged Congress to adopt economic policies that would encourage American industry to expand its investment in jobcreating activities.

This in turn, the NAM said, would provide a practical solution for the employment problems of Appalachia, as well as for the other lagging regions.

In a statement filed with the Senate Committee on Public Works, the Association recommended economy in federal spending and further tax reduction to improve business incentives and increase funds available for private investment.

"In dealing with the problems of poverty throughout the country the need is for policies which will remove the barriers to economic growth in the productive, private sector of the economu," the NAM said.

Another major objective, according to the association, should be more widespread use of the proven principles of voluntary cooperation -- self-help programs which are accomplishing excellent results in many parts of the country.

Rather than turning to massive government spending programs, the NAM said the nation should seek wider application of practical, workable retraining and re-education programs and community self-help projects that individual companies and communities are using every day to solve local problems.

Almost every motorist who has driven out of his own state has encountered considerable differences in laws and ordinances. With them often came misunderstanding, unintentional law violations and accidents.

The need for agreement on uniform traffic laws has grown with increased interstate motor vehicle travel. Out of this need developed the Uniform Vehicle Code, which is a guide for states. Since its inception in 1926, the Code has been periodically reviewed. Changes have been made where warranted on the basis of its past practical operation and because of new developments in motor vehicle traffic.

At the present time there is a substantial degree of non-uniformity between Missouri traffic laws and the Uniform Vehicle Code in the area of traffic law commonly referred to as "Rules of the Road." These rules of the road deal with those regulations which govern the actions of all drivers and pedestrians.

The Interim Committee on uniform traffic laws has proposed for consideration by the 73rd Missouri General Assembly, a safety bill that would adopt much of the Uniform Motor Vehicle Code with respect to its rules of the road.

Colonel Hugh H. Waggoner, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, declared, "The rapid increase of highways, vehicles and drivers, together with the growing trend toward more interstate travel, stresses the need for sound, uniform rules of the road to govern the actions of drivers and pedestrians where ever they might be.

"I earnestly hope the bill proposed by the Interim Committee will be adopted. The removal of motorists' doubts in such matters of right-of-way, passing and the execution of turns, will better enable motorists to know and obey the rules, regardless of where they travel. It will also make for a more efficient flow of traffic and help reduce the danger of accidents," the Colonel concluded.

DOOM-CRIERS

Thoughtful friends of freedom take pride in calling themselves "constructive." But they need to show if the name fits.

There are too many doom-criers on the freedom side today. The many dangers they point to are great and real. But it is not enough to tell people what is wrong. They must be shown what is right. Otherwise, the predicted doom will come no matter how many warnings are given.

Nearly every patriot knows of far more which should be done than he has any time to do. Nearly every one knows of far more that is wrong than he can possibly put right. But so long as patriots concentrate on telling each other how bad things are, even some of their best friends will begin to dread the moment when they come in sight.

Every informed believer in freedom knows the peril in which we stand today. He does not need to be constantly reminded of that. But he does need guidance in constructive action. People in general need to know far more than they do about the joys and rewards which freedom brings.

It is not even enough simply to say that freedom is good. We must show why Freedom is good, and then more and more people will be inspired to seek it. If we cannot put our country on the right course, at once, we certainly should explain far better than we have yet, just what that course ought to be.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — An unreported human drama took place last weekend at the White House. President Johnson learned that Dr. Gordon Seagrave, the famed Burma surgeon, might be dying and that his son couldn't raise enough money to fly to his bedside in Burma.

Sterling Seagrave, after receiving a cable that his father had collapsed, could scrape up only enough money for a one-way ticket. However, Burma won't admit a visitor who hasn't the means to pay his way home.

In desperation, the son appealed to the State Department for the possibility of government transportation, but its bureaucrats seemed more concerned about red tape than a mission of mercy. No one wanted to waive the regulations against free transportation for non-government civilians.

As a last hope, Seagrave tried the White House. He described his problem to McGeorge Bundy's office, which tried to arrange transportation for him at the Pentagon.

The Burma surgeon, a fourth-generation American missionary who studied medicine at Johns Hopkins University, has devoted his life to helping people. But no one at the Defense Department wanted to stick his neck out to help the good doctor have a last visit with his son.

Finally, Bundy called the problem to the President's attention. Without hesitation, Johnson overruled the bureaucrats. Travel orders were issued to Sterling Seagrave to fly to Burma on the first available Air Force plane.

"The full policy has not yet been determined and labor can help us with it by cooperating."

However, there is no indication that Mr. Meany and his colleagues will shift their position. They are positively opposed to dealing with the Soviet bloc without quid pro quos — such as the pulling down of the Berlin Wall.

And that's not likely to topple or be pulled down by either side.

ANN LANDERS
Answers your problems

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a young bride whose groom cried on his wedding night because he was lonesome for his mother. Anyone who thinks that letter was a fake because such a thing just couldn't happen is lucky. I know how real it is because I married a man who had the identical problem.

When the minister finished the ceremony (this was 32 years ago) he said, "You may now kiss bride." My groom turned to me and said, "Later, dear, I can't kiss you in front of my mother."

The happiest days I knew were the eight months before my husband died. A psychiatric social worker had a long talk with him and pointed out that the Bible says a man should put his wife before his mother. He had never heard of this before. It changed our entire marriage relationship.

I don't know if this letter makes sense to women who don't have the problem, but maybe it is worth printing for the benefit of young girls who are going with Mama's boys. -- MUSKEGON.

Dear M.: The letter from that young bride produced a surprising number of responses similar to yours. I learn from my readers every day that the "unusual" is often pretty common after all.

Dear Ann Landers: Pop is 62 years old and has always enjoyed good health. Last year the doctor told him an infection in his system was caused by bad teeth and he urged Pop to see a dentist.

The dentist said Pop should have had his teeth extracted years ago so we finally talked him into doing it. Now we are having nothing but trouble. The new teeth cost a fortune and they look terrible. Pop says they don't fit and he refuses to wear them. The dentist has adjusted them three times and Pop says they are worse than ever.

Mom won't go any place with Pop unless he puts his teeth in. It's fight, fight, fight -- night and day -- and we don't know what to do. Please suggest something. -- AT WAR.

Dear At: If you bought two dozen eggs and discovered they were rotten would you use them anyway? Why insist the poor guy wear teeth just because they are paid for?

Take Pop to another dentist and start all over again. Don't force him to sulk in toothless silence. And going without those china choppers is very bad for Pop's general health.

Dear Ann Landers: Our nine-year-old son was sent home from school this morning. One teacher has been picking on Jordon since the beginning of the year. Jordon says he did nothing wrong and that the teacher is just plain mean.

I know my child is far from perfect, Miss Landers, but he has always told me the truth. I happen to know this teacher had a romantic disappointment last year and it turned her sour on life. I'm sure she is taking out her unhappiness on the children and I resent the whole thing. What sould be done about it? -- A MOTHER?

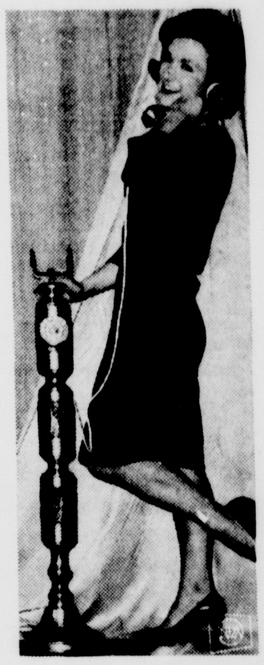

Dear Mother: When a child is sent from school in the middle of the day "For no reason," you can be sure there is a reason of some sort. Go to school and learn what it is.

You do your child no favor when you decide, without benefit of the facts, that the teacher is mean and your son is in the clear.

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "What to Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

¼ teaspon red food coloring

Combine cornstarch, sugar and cinnamon. Drain cherries, reserving liquid. Add enough water to cherry liquid to make 1 cup. Add liquid to sugar mixture. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and clear. Add cherries and food coloring. Cook until just heated through. Yield: 2½ cups sauce.

ANN LANDERS
Answers your problems

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a young bride whose groom cried on his wedding night because he was lonesome for his mother. Anyone who thinks that letter was a fake because such a thing just couldn't happen is lucky. I know how real it is because I married a man who had the identical problem.

When the minister finished the ceremony (this was 32 years ago) he said, "You may now kiss bride." My groom turned to me and said, "Later, dear, I can't kiss you in front of my mother."

The happiest days I knew were the eight months before my husband died. A psychiatric social worker had a long talk with him and pointed out that the Bible says a man should put his wife before his mother. He had never heard of this before. It changed our entire marriage relationship.

I don't know if this letter makes sense to women who don't have the problem, but maybe it is worth printing for the benefit of young girls who are going with Mama's boys. -- MUSKEGON.

Dear M.: The letter from that young bride produced a surprising number of responses similar to yours. I learn from my readers every day that the "unusual" is often pretty common after all.

Dear Ann Landers: Pop is 62 years old and has always enjoyed good health. Last year the doctor told him an infection in his system was caused by bad teeth and he urged Pop to see a dentist.

The dentist said Pop should have had his teeth extracted years ago so we finally talked him into doing it. Now we are having nothing but trouble. The new teeth cost a fortune and they look terrible. Pop says they don't fit and he refuses to wear them. The dentist has adjusted them three times and Pop says they are worse than ever.

Mom won't go any place with Pop unless he puts his teeth in. It's fight, fight, fight -- night and day -- and we don't know what to do. Please suggest something. -- AT WAR.

Dear At: If you bought two dozen eggs and discovered they were rotten would you use them anyway? Why insist the poor guy wear teeth just because they are paid for?

Take Pop to another dentist and start all over again. Don't force him to sulk in toothless silence. And going without those china choppers is very bad for Pop's general health.

Dear Ann Landers: Our nine-year-old son was sent home from school this morning. One teacher has been picking on Jordon since the beginning of the year. Jordon says he did nothing wrong and that the teacher is just plain mean.

I know my child is far from perfect, Miss Landers, but he has always told me the truth. I happen to know this teacher had a romantic disappointment last year and it turned her sour on life. I'm sure she is taking out her unhappiness on the children and I resent the whole thing. What sould be done about it? -- A MOTHER?

Dear Mother: When a child is sent from school in the middle of the day "For no reason," you can be sure there is a reason of some sort. Go to school and learn what it is.

You do your child no favor when you decide, without benefit of the facts, that the teacher is mean and your son is in the clear.

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "What to Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Poplar Bluff And Central Win

They Clash In The Finals Tonight

DEXTER -- Top-seeded Poplar Bluff fought their way into the finals of class L regional tournament here last night with a hard-pressed win over the fourth seeded Dexter Bearcats 66-49. Cape Central registered the first upset in the tournament by downing the second seeded Jackson Indians 71-54 with a hot-scoring second half.

Poplar Bluff (66)
Dexter (49)

This was the twentieth win of the season for the Mules opposed by three defeats. Their defense was stronger in this game than it has been in recent contests with their holding the Bearcats without a field goal until 4:45 was left in the second quarter. In the first period they outscored Dexter 14 to 3 and as first half play ended the Mules were out front 31-14.

Gordon McKee, high scoring star for the Bearcats, could manage only seven points last night to end his high school career. This seven points wasn't the best way to end a brilliant season, but he has more than carried the Bearcats on the offensive end of hardwood all year.

Ronnie Dunning paced the Mules through their workout with 20 tallies.

Cape Central (71)
Jackson (54)

The Tigers plummeted out to lead 18-11 in the first period and never lost their advantage from there.

Mike Bremmerman and Syl Johnson sparked Central with 23 and 25 respectively.

Sports Shavings

by Dan Whittle

Since the onslaught of the basketball season there have been many things occurred to teams. Some have had winning seasons, some losing seasons, and a few of those losers were among the most improved ballclubs on the hardwoods.

Take the Scott Central Braves. At the start and up until about the midway point the Braves were not given serious consideration by opposing teams. But by the time they got into the regional tournament they were drawing more than just glances. And for good reason. They went on to play four seeded teams and they dumped three of them to take down the third place trophy.

Let's view the Sikeston Bulldogs. They had their ups and downs all through the year. They started off by dropping their first two games before zeroing in on the win column against the Cape Central Tigers. It looked as if they just might be ready to really start the old ball rolling. Then the Jackson Indians came to town to end that by defeating them 52-51.

The season kept rolling along until they piled up five consecutive wins to push their record to 7-3. From there the Bulldogs dropped their last seven of eight games. But they kept plugging and by the time the Class "L" Regional at Dexter started they were being viewed cautiously. They all but knocked down the Poplar Bluff Mules in a surprising 64-61 verdict. Possibly the chief contribution to Sikeston's superb performance was their willingness to hustle and their desire to win. If they could have gotten through the Mules tough press in the second half, then it would have been good-bye Mules.

Dexter, like Sikeston, has a lot of youth on their club, including their coach. But don't let that fool you, they are as tough as can be. Adding to their toughness is the return of Rick Mooney. He played in the opening game of the tournament Tuesday night against the Charleston Blue Jays, but not in full duty. His absence was thought for a long time to be possibly resulting from the black birds that roost near Dexter. But from an unofficial source it has been reported that Rick is quite a dog lover and is allergic to many different things. His pet dog was removed and Rick has been feeling better ever since. Coach Jim Hall says, "After finding out about the dog incident I find it hard to find any love for them."

Managers Are Not Worried By Baseball

Spring training isn't even a week old and already worry lines are furrowing the brows of some managers.

Baseball isn't what's bothering the San Francisco Giants' Herman Franks, or Casey Stengel, patriarch of the New York Mets, or Al Lopez, skipper of the Chicago White Sox.

Franks is concerned by his waistline, Stengel is bothered by thieves and Lopez is worried about, of all things, the National Basketball Association standings.

Franks, rookie manager of the Giants, stepped on the scales at the club's Casa Grande, Ariz., training base and flashed a wide smile when the arrow pointed to 210 pounds. "I got it made," he grinned. "It will be a breeze from here on in."

Franks, who scaled 235 while coaching the Giants last year, has a bet with club President Horace Stoneham and other members of the Giant hierarchy that he can slim down to 200 by opening day.

Stengel, the Glendale, Calif., bank executive who spends his summers directing the Mets, got word from his wife, Edna, that three burglars were arrested after allegedly trying to break into the Stengel home.

The manager heard about the attempt at the Mets' St. Petersburg, Fla., camp. Stengel said he was relieved that nothing had been taken.

"I was afraid they had stolen that big oil painting of Yogi Berra," he said. "The gold frame is worth a lot of money. I value it at $20,000 in my head. It has great sentimental value."

Berra, the Mets' new coach, had no comment.

Meanwhile, the Mets signed Charlie Smith, leaving only outfielder Joe Christopher still unsigned. The Chicago White Sox inked pitcher Joe Horlen and are missing only hurlers Juan Pizarro and Dave DeBusschere. And therein lies Lopez' problem with the NBA standings.

DeBusschere, a promising right-hander who was 15-8 with Indianapolis last year happens to be a basketball player during the winter. In fact, he's the player - coach for the Detroit Pistons of the NBA.

Now ordinarily that would be much of a problem but this season the Pistons are making overtures at an NBA playoff berth. If DeBusschere's club makes it, his arrival at the White Sox' Sarasota, Fla., camp would be delayed considerably more than the week or two he usually misses. And that could pose a problem for Senor Lopez.

Claude Provost, Montreal's handy right wing, has personally shouldered the Canadiens into second place in the National Hockey League.

Provost, for years considered one of the league's top defensive forwards, has blossomed into a scorer and his 25th goal of the season Thursday night gave Montreal a 2-2 tie with the Toronto Maple Leafs. In the only other game played, New York came from behind and nipped Boston 4-3.

The tie gave the Canadiens second place, one point up on idle Detroit and left the Habs just two points back of first-place Chicago. Toronto, winless in the last five games, is fourth, five points back of the Red Wings and eight behind the Black Hawks.

Walt Wesley Is Lone Unanimous Choice All-Star

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY AP -- Walt Wesley, the 6-foot-11 Kansas pivot who wears Wilt Chamberlain's old KU number -13-was the only unanimous choice and Oklahoma State's Jim King was just four votes from unanimous on the Associated Press 1965-All - Big Eight Basketball Team announced today.

Hank Iba, 60-year-old Oklahoma State coach who reached a long-cherished goal, his first Big Eight championship, was named Big Eight Coach of the Year. He was a 2-to-1 choice over Iowa State's Glen Anderson.

Behind Wesley and the 6-foot-6 King, competition was close. Hard - driving 6-foot-3 Al Koch of Iowa State and 6-7 Chuck Guardner of Colorado were next in the voting. Oklahoma's 6-5 Jim Gatewood won the last spot on the first team by a scant four votes over Pat Frink of Colorado.

King and Gatewood are the only seniors on the first team, which is averaging 88 points, 44 rebounds, shooting .483 from the field and .708 from the foul line in league games.

Wesley made a run at Chamberlain's league scoring record of 28.3 set in 1958. His average shot up to 28.1 before the last two games. His current mark of 26.5 is third in league history behind Chamberlain and the 28.0 by Clyde Lovellette. Both were All America choices at Kansas.

King and Wesley rank 1-2 in field accuracy, King and Koch 1-2 in free throw accuracy and all but Koch rank in the first seven rebounders. Koch has a 17.3 scoring mark. Gardner 15.8, Gatewood 14.7 and King 13.6.

King is one of the best defensive big men in the nation. Wesley's shot-blocking, defense and rebounding all improved the last half of the season. Gardner, an A-minus student who came to Colorado on an academic scholarship, suddenly blossomed at the outset of the conference schedule.

Gatewood is the first Oklahoma player to make the All-Big Eight team in several years. He's an all-around standout.

Kansas State failed to place a man on the first team for the first time in a decade and didn't land a second - team berth.

Frink was the top vote-getter on the second team. As usual, the writers, sportscasters and coaches leaned heavily toward size in their choices. Missouri's Ned Monsees, a rugged 6-4 recruit from the intramural ranks who is tied for the league rebounding lead, is the second team's tallest man. The other second team members:

Bob Ziegler, 6-3 Iowa State sharpshooter and the league's No. 2 scorer at 18.9; Oklahoma State's clever playmaker and scorer, 6-1 Larry Hawk; and 5-11 Gary Garner, Missouri's little long - range bomber.

Al Lopes, Kansas, and Gary Hassmann, OSU, just missed the second team.

Frink was a solid choice for Big Eight Sophomore of the Year, polling more than the combined vote of Fred Hare, Nebraska, and Ron Coleman, Missouri, who tied for second.

WBA Title Fight Set For Tonight

CHICAGO AP -- Ernie Terrell and Eddie Machen, a couple of contenders hidden in the shadow of Cassius Clay, clash tonight in a 15-rounder for the World Boxing Association's version of the heavyweight championship.

Terrell, a 6-foot-6, guitar-strumming boxer who has won 12 straight fights, is a 12-5 choice over the 6-foot Californian, who was beaten in his last fight by former champion Floyd Patterson.

Promoter Irving Schoenwald is hoping for a crowd of about 7,000 and a gross gate of $60,000 for the International Amphitheatre.

The bout will be shown on closed - circuit television in several cities. There will be no radio broadcast. Fight time is 10:30 p.m., EST.

This is a title fight of sorts because the WBA stripped Clay of title recognition for signing a return match with Sonny Liston. This violated the WBA's rule against return title bouts without special permission. Liston was dropped out of the rankings after another one of his brushes with the law.

The WBA first named Terrell and Cleveland Williams of Houston to meet for the title. But Williams was shot in a scrape with the police near Houston and was fired out of the contention.

So Machen, who was ranked fifth after losing a 12-rounder to former champion Patterson at Stockholm last July 5, was boosted to No. 4 and into the title fight with Terrell. Now he is ranked No. 3.

New York still recognizes Clay, who meets Liston in Boston May 25, as champion. The British Boxing Board of Control considers the Terrell- Machen fight "little more than a joke" as far as the world title is concerned.

The European Boxing Union does not recognize Clay as champion but says the Chicago fight is nothing more than a preliminary since it holds the winner must fight Patterson.

Patterson, meanwhile, is itching for a shot at Clay and later with Liston, the man who knocked him out twice in the first round.

Terrell, 25, has a 36-4 record, including 18 knockouts. He was stopped once, by Williams in the seventh round at Houston, April 3, 1962. Since then he has swept to 12 victories and is No. 1 in the WBA ratings.

Machen, 32, has been fighting pro for 10 years with more ups and downs than a yo-yo. His record is 47-5-2, including 29 knockouts. His only knockout loss was in the first round by Ingemar Johansson in Sweden, Sept. 14, 1958.

Tale of the tape for the World Boxing Association heavyweight title fight Friday night between Eddie Machen and Ernie Terrell:

Key Injury Led To Semo Downfall

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- A broken ankle suffered by forward Thal Thrower, coupled with a failure to get the big breaks and the big plays, led to the first season out of five that Southeast Missouri State College has failed to win the MIAA basketball championship.

The Indians, with a final record of 15-8, were 6-4 in the conference, tied for second with Southwest Missouri. Central Missouri, at 9-1, won this year's crown.

In a year-end assessment by head coach Charles Parsley, the turning point of the season was a broken ankle suffered by Thrower in a crucial game at Springfield.

Thrower, senior from Kennett, "was playing the best ball he had ever played," Parsley said. "We not only missed his height, hustle, and steadying influence, but worst of all his loss cost us all our reserve height.

"This hurt us in the important games at the end of the season, when our big men got in foul trouble, or when they needed rest."

Even so, Parsley felt, his squad was outclassed in only one game, against Arkansas State at Jonesboro. "That was the only game," he said, "that we didn't feel we could have won. In all of the other seven losses, a key play or break for us could have swung the game our way."

Parsley added that one of the main reasons for the success of his previous teams had been the ability to get the big play in crucial points.

"I was pleasantly surprised in the first part of the season," Parsley said. "We were having more success than I thought we would, and it looked like we might get another shot at the title. But instead of improving, we seemed to tail off after the end of January."

The SEMO coach, who said that morale and team spirit had remained high throughout the season, thought the thin line of balance had probably been tipped by the weakness caused by the loss of Thrower.

Although conceding a general lack of overal individual consistency, he said that he had been pleased with the play of his regulars and the improvement in a number of reserves.

Parsley was especially happy with the performance of sophomore forward Kermit Meystedt of Cape Girardeau, in his first season as a regular, and with that of guard Ron Hextell, Chicago junior, also in his first starting role.

Both return next year, along with starting 6-6 forward Tom Drexler, Maplewood junior, and with reserve forward Dwight Turner, of Clarkton, a junior, and reserve guards Ken Wilkerson, Fisk junior, Bill Bekebrede, St. Louis junior, and Jim Carter, Houston junior.

Drexler, a two year veteran of the starting lineup, averaged 10.7 points per game this season, good for fourth, and was third in rebounding at 7.2.

Gone next year will be the team's two leading scorers, guard Mike Gross of Maplewood and 6-7 center Jack Becker of St. Charles. Gross ended the season with a 17.5 average, while Becker had 14.3. Becker was also the leading rebounder with 10.4 per game.

No big rebounders appear to be in prospect from the current varsity or junior - varsity teams to replace Becker, although Turner, at 6-3, could break into the lineup. A pre-season shoulder operation kept him from a true test under fire until late in the season.

Freshman Charlie Bertrand of Illmo and sophomore Curtis Williams of Cape Girardeau, two guards who both saw limited action with the varsity, are considered good prospects for next season, as are Shelton Smith of Poplar Bluff and Norman Vanamburg, of Lutesville, both of whom saw action only with the jaycees.

The Indians could also get help next season from guard Steve Howell, sidelined by grades this semester, and from Pete Ulmer of Benton, who attended Austin Peay for one quarter before transferring here.

"Our biggest need for next season is big men on the inside to help Meystedt," Parsley said. "We'll be trying to concentrate on getting good freshmen, along with at least a couple of junior college transfers."

Watch Your Baggage!
Robert Shaw, head of the baggage transfer division of Allied Maintenance Corp. at Kennedy International Airport in New York, supervises the arrival, departure and interline transfer of 1.2 million pieces of luggage yearly for 21 airlines. He has some tips for air travelers--what the passenger can do to speed his bag to his destination.

Check it. Note clarity of your baggage tag. A busy airline clerk in haste may write an airline code to look like another. Example: United (UA), Viasa (VA), National (NA).

Lock it. A bag can pass through as many as 12 different hands in a high-speed transfer for a normal flight. Luggage bursting open could cause delay and a missed flight.

Tape it. Two pieces of reflective tape over the closure offer double protection against the bag accidentally opening. Makes it easier to spot at baggage pickup, too.

Name it. Initials alone are not much help if luggage strays. Tape your full name and address across the top, or put your business card under the handle.

Tote it. Carry in the cabin whenever possible fragile items and items such as aerosol shave cream. Strange things can happen in the plane's nonpressurized cargo space.

Ask questions. If transferring, make sure your travel clerk has allowed enough time for your luggage to catch up with you. At JFK, for example, 35 minutes may be needed from arrival to departure.

Cape Central registered the first upset in the tournament by downing the second seeded Jackson Indians 71-54 with a hot-scoring second half.

Poplar Bluff (66)
Dexter (49)

This was the twentieth win of the season for the Mules opposed by three defeats. Their defense was stronger in this game than it has been in recent contests with their holding the Bearcats without a field goal until 4:45 was left in the second quarter. In the first period they outscored Dexter 14 to 3 and as first half play ended the Mules were out front 31-14.

Gordon McKee, high scoring star for the Bearcats, could manage only seven points last night to end his high school career. This seven points wasn't the best way to end a brilliant season, but he has more than carried the Bearcats on the offensive end of hardwood all year.

Ronnie Dunning paced the Mules through their workout with 20 tallies.

Cape Central (71)
Jackson (54)

The Tigers plummeted out to lead 18-11 in the first period and never lost their advantage from there.

Mike Bremmerman and Syl Johnson sparked Central with 23 and 25 respectively.

Sports Shavings

by Dan Whittle

Since the onslaught of the basketball season there have been many things occurred to teams. Some have had winning seasons, some losing seasons, and a few of those losers were among the most improved ballclubs on the hardwoods.

Take the Scott Central Braves. At the start and up until about the midway point the Braves were not given serious consideration by opposing teams. But by the time they got into the regional tournament they were drawing more than just glances. And for good reason. They went on to play four seeded teams and they dumped three of them to take down the third place trophy.

Let's view the Sikeston Bulldogs. They had their ups and downs all through the year. They started off by dropping their first two games before zeroing in on the win column against the Cape Central Tigers. It looked as if they just might be ready to really start the old ball rolling. Then the Jackson Indians came to town to end that by defeating them 52-51.

The season kept rolling along until they piled up five consecutive wins to push their record to 7-3. From there the Bulldogs dropped their last seven of eight games. But they kept plugging and by the time the Class "L" Regional at Dexter started they were being viewed cautiously. They all but knocked down the Poplar Bluff Mules in a surprising 64-61 verdict. Possibly the chief contribution to Sikeston's superb performance was their willingness to hustle and their desire to win. If they could have gotten through the Mules tough press in the second half, then it would have been good-bye Mules.

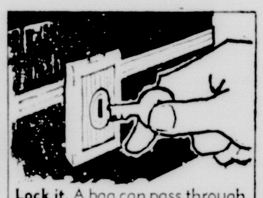

Dexter, like Sikeston, has a lot of youth on their club, including their coach. But don't let that fool you, they are as tough as can be. Adding to their toughness is the return of Rick Mooney. He played in the opening game of the tournament Tuesday night against the Charleston Blue Jays, but not in full duty. His absence was thought for a long time to be possibly resulting from the black birds that roost near Dexter. But from an unofficial source it has been reported that Rick is quite a dog lover and is allergic to many different things. His pet dog was removed and Rick has been feeling better ever since. Coach Jim Hall says, "After finding out about the dog incident I find it hard to find any love for them."

Watch Your Baggage!

Robert Shaw, head of the baggage transfer division of Allied Maintenance Corp. at Kennedy International Airport in New York, supervises the arrival, departure and interline transfer of 1.2 million pieces of luggage yearly for 21 airlines. He has some tips for air travelers--what the passenger can do to speed his bag to his destination.

Check it. Note clarity of your baggage tag. A busy airline clerk in haste may write an airline code to look like another. Example: United (UA), Viasa (VA), National (NA).

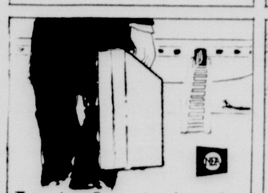

Lock it. A bag can pass through as many as 12 different hands in a high-speed transfer for a normal flight. Luggage bursting open could cause delay and a missed flight.

Tape it. Two pieces of reflective tape over the closure offer double protection against the bag accidentally opening. Makes it easier to spot at baggage pickup, too.

Name it. Initials alone are not much help if luggage strays. Tape your full name and address across the top, or put your business card under the handle.

Tote it. Carry in the cabin whenever possible fragile items and items such as aerosol shave cream. Strange things can happen in the plane's nonpressurized cargo space.

Ask questions. If transferring, make sure your travel client has allowed enough time for your luggage to catch up with you. At JFK, for example, 35 minutes may be needed from arrival to departure.

Managers Are Not Worried By Baseball

Spring training isn't even a week old and already worry lines are furrowing the brows of some managers.

Baseball isn't what's bothering the San Francisco Giants' Herman Franks, or Casey Stengel, patriarch of the New York Mets, or Al Lopez, skipper of the Chicago White Sox.

Franks is concerned by his waistline, Stengel is bothered by thieves and Lopez is worried about, of all things, the National Basketball Association standings.

Franks, rookie manager of the Giants, stepped on the scales at the club's Casa Grande, Ariz., training base and flashed a wide smile when the arrow pointed to 210 pounds. "I got it made," he grinned. "It will be a breeze from here on in."

Franks, who scaled 235 while coaching the Giants last year, has a bet with club President Horace Stoneham and other members of the Giant hierarchy that he can slim down to 200 by opening day.

Stengel, the Glendale, Calif., bank executive who spends his summers directing the Mets, got word from his wife, Edna, that three burglars were arrested after allegedly trying to break into the Stengel home.

The manager heard about the attempt at the Mets' St. Petersburg, Fla., camp. Stengel said he was relieved that nothing had been taken.

"I was afraid they had stolen that big oil painting of Yogi Berra," he said. "The gold frame is worth a lot of money. I value it at $20,000 in my head. It has great sentimental value."

Berra, the Mets' new coach, had no comment.

Meanwhile, the Mets signed Charlie Smith, leaving only outfielder Joe Christopher still unsigned. The Chicago White Sox inked pitcher Joe Horlen and are missing only hurlers Juan Pizarro and Dave DeBusschere. And therein lies Lopez' problem with the NBA standings.

DeBusschere, a promising right-hander who was 15-8 with Indianapolis last year happens to be a basketball player during the winter. In fact, he's the player - coach for the Detroit Pistons of the NBA.

Now ordinarily that would be much of a problem but this season the Pistons are making overtures at an NBA playoff berth. If DeBusschere's club makes it, his arrival at the White Sox' Sarasota, Fla., camp would be delayed considerably more than the week or two he usually misses. And that could pose a problem for Senor Lopez.

Claude Provost, Montreal's handy right wing, has personally shouldered the Canadiens into second place in the National Hockey League.

Provost, for years considered one of the league's top defensive forwards, has blossomed into a scorer and his 25th goal of the season Thursday night gave Montreal a 2-2 tie with the Toronto Maple Leafs. In the only other game played, New York came from behind and nipped Boston 4-3.

The tie gave the Canadiens second place, one point up on idle Detroit and left the Habs just two points back of first-place Chicago. Toronto, winless in the last five games, is fourth, five points back of the Red Wings and eight behind the Black Hawks.

Walt Wesley Is Lone Unanimous Choice All-Star

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY AP -- Walt Wesley, the 6-foot-11 Kansas pivot who wears Wilt Chamberlain's old KU number -13-was the only unanimous choice and Oklahoma State's Jim King was just four votes from unanimous on the Associated Press 1965-All - Big Eight Basketball Team announced today.

Hank Iba, 60-year-old Oklahoma State coach who reached a long-cherished goal, his first Big Eight championship, was named Big Eight Coach of the Year. He was a 2-to-1 choice over Iowa State's Glen Anderson.

Behind Wesley and the 6-foot-6 King, competition was close. Hard - driving 6-foot-3 Al Koch of Iowa State and 6-7 Chuck Guardner of Colorado were next in the voting. Oklahoma's 6-5 Jim Gatewood won the last spot on the first team by a scant four votes over Pat Frink of Colorado.

King and Gatewood are the only seniors on the first team, which is averaging 88 points, 44 rebounds, shooting .483 from the field and .708 from the foul line in league games.

Wesley made a run at Chamberlain's league scoring record of 28.3 set in 1958. His average shot up to 28.1 before the last two games. His current mark of 26.5 is third in league history behind Chamberlain and the 28.0 by Clyde Lovellette. Both were All America choices at Kansas.

King and Wesley rank 1-2 in field accuracy, King and Koch 1-2 in free throw accuracy and all but Koch rank in the first seven rebounders. Koch has a 17.3 scoring mark. Gardner 15.8, Gatewood 14.7 and King 13.6.

King is one of the best defensive big men in the nation. Wesley's shot-blocking, defense and rebounding all improved the last half of the season. Gardner, an A-minus student who came to Colorado on an academic scholarship, suddenly blossomed at the outset of the conference schedule.

Gatewood is the first Oklahoma player to make the All-Big Eight team in several years. He's an all-around standout.

Kansas State failed to place a man on the first team for the first time in a decade and didn't land a second - team berth.

Frink was the top vote-getter on the second team. As usual, the writers, sportscasters and coaches leaned heavily toward size in their choices. Missouri's Ned Monsees, a rugged 6-4 recruit from the intramural ranks who is tied for the league rebounding lead, is the second team's tallest man. The other second team members:

Bob Ziegler, 6-3 Iowa State sharpshooter and the league's No. 2 scorer at 18.9; Oklahoma State's clever playmaker and scorer, 6-1 Larry Hawk; and 5-11 Gary Garner, Missouri's little long - range bomber.

Al Lopes, Kansas, and Gary Hassmann, OSU, just missed the second team.

Frink was a solid choice for Big Eight Sophomore of the Year, polling more than the combined vote of Fred Hare, Nebraska, and Ron Coleman, Missouri, who tied for second.

WBA Title Fight Set For Tonight

CHICAGO AP -- Ernie Terrell and Eddie Machen, a couple of contenders hidden in the shadow of Cassius Clay, clash tonight in a 15-rounder for the World Boxing Association's version of the heavyweight championship.

Terrell, a 6-foot-6, guitar-strumming boxer who has won 12 straight fights, is a 12-5 choice over the 6-foot Californian, who was beaten in his last fight by former champion Floyd Patterson.

Promoter Irving Schoenwald is hoping for a crowd of about 7,000 and a gross gate of $60,000 for the International Amphitheatre.

The bout will be shown on closed - circuit television in several cities. There will be no radio broadcast. Fight time is 10:30 p.m., EST.

This is a title fight of sorts because the WBA stripped Clay of title recognition for signing a return match with Sonny Liston. This violated the WBA's rule against return title bouts without special permission. Liston was dropped out of the rankings after another one of his brushes with the law.

The WBA first named Terrell and Cleveland Williams of Houston to meet for the title. But Williams was shot in a scrape with the police near Houston and was fired out of the contention.

So Machen, who was ranked fifth after losing a 12-rounder to former champion Patterson at Stockholm last July 5, was boosted to No. 4 and into the title fight with Terrell. Now he is ranked No. 3.

New York still recognizes Clay, who meets Liston in Boston May 25, as champion. The British Boxing Board of Control considers the Terrell- Machen fight "little more than a joke" as far as the world title is concerned.

The European Boxing Union does not recognize Clay as champion but says the Chicago fight is nothing more than a preliminary since it holds the winner must fight Patterson.

Patterson, meanwhile, is itching for a shot at Clay and later with Liston, the man who knocked him out twice in the first round.

Terrell, 25, has a 36-4 record, including 18 knockouts. He was stopped once, by Williams in the seventh round at Houston, April 3, 1962. Since then he has swept to 12 victories and is No. 1 in the WBA ratings.

Machen, 32, has been fighting pro for 10 years with more ups and downs than a yo-yo. His record is 47-5-2, including 29 knockouts. His only knockout loss was in the first round by Ingemar Johansson in Sweden, Sept. 14, 1958.

Tale of the tape for the World Boxing Association heavyweight title fight Friday night between Eddie Machen and Ernie Terrell:

Key Injury Led To Semo Downfall

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. -- A broken ankle suffered by forward Thal Thrower, coupled with a failure to get the big breaks and the big plays, led to the first season out of five that Southeast Missouri State College has failed to win the MIAA basketball championship.

The Indians, with a final record of 15-8, were 6-4 in the conference, tied for second with Southwest Missouri. Central Missouri, at 9-1, won this year's crown.

In a year-end assessment by head coach Charles Parsley, the turning point of the season was a broken ankle suffered by Thrower in a crucial game at Springfield.

Thrower, senior from Kennett, "was playing the best ball he had ever played," Parsley said. "We not only missed his height, hustle, and steadying influence, but worst of all his loss cost us all our reserve height.

"This hurt us in the important games at the end of the season, when our big men got in foul trouble, or when they needed rest."

Even so, Parsley felt, his squad was outclassed in only one game, against Arkansas State at Jonesboro. "That was the only game," he said, "that we didn't feel we could have won. In all of the other seven losses, a key play or break for us could have swung the game our way."

Parsley added that one of the main reasons for the success of his previous teams had been the ability to get the big play in crucial points.

"I was pleasantly surprised in the first part of the season," Parsley said. "We were having more success than I thought we would, and it looked like we might get another shot at the title. But instead of improving, we seemed to tail off after the end of January."

The SEMO coach, who said that morale and team spirit had remained high throughout the season, thought the thin line of balance had probably been tipped by the weakness caused by the loss of Thrower.

Although conceding a general lack of overal individual consistency, he said that he had been pleased with the play of his regulars and the improvement in a number of reserves.

Parsley was especially happy with the performance of sophomore forward Kermit Meystedt of Cape Girardeau, in his first season as a regular, and with that of guard Ron Hextell, Chicago junior, also in his first starting role.

Both return next year, along with starting 6-6 forward Tom Drexler, Maplewood junior, and with reserve forward Dwight Turner, of Clarkton, a junior, and reserve guards Ken Wilkerson, Fisk junior, Bill Bekebrede, St. Louis junior, and Jim Carter, Houston junior.

Drexler, a two year veteran of the starting lineup, averaged 10.7 points per game this season, good for fourth, and was third in rebounding at 7.2.

Gone next year will be the team's two leading scorers, guard Mike Gross of Maplewood and 6-7 center Jack Becker of St. Charles. Gross ended the season with a 17.5 average, while Becker had 14.3. Becker was also the leading rebounder with 10.4 per game.

No big rebounders appear to be in prospect from the current varsity or junior - varsity teams to replace Becker, although Turner, at 6-3, could break into the lineup. A preseason shoulder operation kept him from a true test under fire until late in the season.

Freshman Charlie Bertrand of Illmo and sophomore Curtis Williams of Cape Girardeau, two guards who both saw limited action with the varsity, are considered good prospects for next season, as are Shelton Smith of Poplar Bluff and Norman Vanamburg, of Lutesville, both of whom saw action only with the jaycees.

The Indians could also get help next season from guard Steve Howell, sidelined by grades this semester, and from Pete Ulmer of Benton, who attended Austin Peay for one quarter before transferring here.

"Our biggest need for next season is big men on the inside to help Meystedt," Parsley said. "We'll be trying to concentrate on getting good freshmen, along with at least a couple of junior college transfers."

Interstate Highway Program Passes Halfway Mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction on the world's greatest highway program yet conceived — the 41,000-mile U.S. interstate system — is past the halfway mark and just about on schedule.

The program was set up by Congress in 1956 and 1972 set as the target date for completion.

It will consist of 41,000 miles of high-speed highways to connect the nation's principal metropolitan areas, cities and industrial centers and to serve as a defense network of roads if needed.

The system generally is designed to take motorists whizzing along without worries about intersections, traffic lights and jammed city streets.

Today, a little more than eight years after the program was launched, 19,018 miles are open for traffic; construction is under way on another 5,196 miles, while engineering work or right-of-way acquisition is in progress for another 12,103.

The remaining 4,680 miles in the system are listed by the Bureau of Public Roads as in preliminary status or not started.

Thus, about 89 per cent of the system is open or under way.

The bureau says the program is about on schedule and that completion in 1972 is possible. However, time is getting short for the drafting of plans for the unstarted segments, a spokesman said.

The pinch, he said, will be on segments in the urban areas — the roads designed to take traffic through, under or around cities. These portions of the system are costly because of the high value of the rights of way involved and frequently the routes are controversial.

When the interstate system was authorized by Congress it called for a network of 40,000 miles of highways to cost an estimated $28 billion. The mileage has been increased to more than 41,000 and the latest cost estimated by the roads administrator, Rex M. Whitton, is $46.8 billion.

The latest estimate represents a $5.8-billion increase over the estimate submitted to Congress in 1961.

Through 1964, a total of $21.7 billion had been spent on the interstate system, roughly $19 billion of it federal money and $2.6 billion state money.

The federal share is financed by highway users through taxes on gasoline, new trucks and buses, tires and tubes and the like.

Today's Spanish Lesson

By William Archer
Lesson No. 13

Reading time 5 min. Study time 5 min.

"Key" #5 -- Now we will give you another "key" to verbs. It is, 'tengo que', and it means, 'I have to' (as a duty or a necessity). It is pronounced 'TANG-go/k', How many times do you say, 'I have to go to class, to the hotel, to work, etc.?. In English, when you say, 'I have', it calls for a noun -- 'I have a book, job, money, etc.'. When you put the preposition 'to' behind 'I have', you make it necessity or duty -- 'I have to work, etc.'. The same is true in Spanish. If you say in Spanish, 'tengo' ('TANG-go'), 'I have', it calls for a noun the same as in English -- 'Tengo un libro', 'I have a book'; and when you add 'que' (pronounced 'K') to 'tengo', it is the same as putting the preposition 'to' after 'have' in English:

A) I have to
B) Tengo que
C) TANG-go/k
A) I have
B) Tengo
C) TANG-go
A) I have to go to my office.
B) Tengo que ir a mi oficina.
C) TANGO -go/k/earah/me/oh-fee-see-nah.

This is a very valuable "key", because you can use it as often as you do in English. 'I have' is 'tengo'; 'I have to' is 'tengo que'.

Now you can say 'I have to go, but I don't want to'. 'I am going to go -- I have to'.

'Work' is an essential word with 'tengo que'. It is, 'trabajar' (trah-bah-HAR):

A) I have to work.
B) Tengo que trabajar.
C) TANG-go/k/trah-bah-HAR
A) I want to play, but I have to work.
B) Quiero jugar, pero tengo que trabajar.
C) key - AIR - o/who - GAR/PAIR - roe/TANG - gok/trah-bah-HAR.
A) I have to go.
B) Tengo quie ir.
C) TANG-go--k--ear.

You can easily see how this new "key" gives you tremendous latitude in Spanish. It is an interesting "key", particularly in view of the numbers of times you employ it in English every day.

The State Reorganization Commission of Missouri

DEPARTMENTAL REORGANIZATION

31. Recommendation:

That the Department of Public Health and Welfare be abolished and that each of the present divisions of the department, Public Health, Welfare, and Mental Diseases be given departmental status.

The Department of Public Health and Welfare is specifically provided for in the state consitution (Art. IV, Sec. 37). Since its creation in 1945, the department has consisted of three major divisions; public health; welfare; and mental diseases. The statutes adopted in 1945 and subsequent legislation over the years related to the department, however, have not created a 'paper' department with each of the three divisions in practice and by statute having a high degree of independence from the director of the department or from each other. The directors of the Divisions of Health and Welfare are appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Senate. By statute, the Division of Mental Diseases is under the general supervision of a state mental health commission. The Commission appoints the director of the Division of Mental Diseases for a term of four years.

The 1955 State Reorganization Commission recommended that the three divisions "be integrated into a functional department." This recommendation has not been adopted. Since 1955 each of the divisions has expanded and increased its programs and services. Although certain programs have required close cooperation among two or all three of the divisions (placement of patients released from state hospitals to private or nursing homes), the fact remains that the major functions of each division are distinct from the functions of the other divisions. For almost 20 years the fiction of a single department has been maintained despite the actual organization and functions of the three divisions. It would appear both logical and practical to establish each division as a department. In order to do so, two constitutional amendments will be required. One amendment will be needed to delete the section of the constitution which provides that there shall be "a department of public health and welfare" (Art. IV, Sec. 37). The other amendment would change the section of the constitution limiting the number of departments so as to allow for the creations of two additional departments (Art. IV, Sec. 12).

INTERDEPARTMENTAL COORDINATION

32. Recommendation:

That the proposed departments of Public Health, Welfare, and Mental Diseases establish joint coordinated programs for research, statistics, and data processing.

The present Divisions of Health, Welfare, and Mental Diseases each presently has separate units for the gathering and preparing of research data and statistics, and the programming and operation of data processing equipment. By consolidating their research data programs as well as their data processing equipment, more comprehensive and useful information could be made available to each department. A single, jointly - sponsored data processing center to serve the three departments could bring about economies in personnel and equipment.

DIVISION OF HEALTH

The state legislature has declared that it is "the general duty and responsibility of the Division of Health to safeguard the health of the people in the state. . ." The statutes specify that the division shall maintain the following bureaus. (1) Vital Statistics; (2) Laboratories; (3) Communicable Diseases; (4) Food and Drug Inspection; (5) Child Hygiene; (6) Public Health Nursing; (7) Tuberculosis Control; (8) Cancer Control; and (9) Dental Health. Other bureaus may be established as necessary.

The 1955 State Reorganization Commission recommended that the laws be changed by deleting specific reference to the bureaus and leave to the administrative discretion the number of bureaus essential to the performance of the Division of Health. This recommendation has not been adopted. However, a second recommendation of the Commission calling for a consolidation of the several bureaus into four units or sections has been carried out by administrative order of the director of the Division of Health.

The present organization of the Division of Health consists of the following four sections: General Services; Hospital and Technical Services; Chronic Diseases; and Local Health Services. Each is headed by a section director, and is under the supervision of the deputy director of the Division of Health. The director of the section of general services is also assistant director of health (administration). The deputy director also supervises four additional programs not assigned to any section: community health and training unit; program planning and development; health mobilization; and maternal and child health.

Reapportionment Plan Developed

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Senate has developed a plan to reapportion itself and let the House sweat out its own redistricting problem.

The Senate Apportionment Committee agreed unanimously Tuesday night on a resolution asking Gov. Warren E. Hearnes to use the present constitutional system. Under it he would call a bipartisan commission to set up new senatorial districts.

Hearnes said in a television interview Tuesday night he thought he would have the power to do this, but wanted the Senate to put it in a formal request.

A special three-judge federal court ruled last December both the House and Senate were malapportioned. It threw out the entire House redistricting formula because it calls for at least one representative from each county.

But it left intact the Senate redistricting machinery. It merely criticized the 25 per cent variation in population between existing districts.

This variation apparently could be corrected without much trouble if the governor called a new redistricting commission into being. He would ask each state party committee to submit 10 nominees to him. Then he would appoint five of each party to do the job.

The apportionment committee took no action on House redistricting.

Instead, Sen. Omer H. Avery, D-Troy, the chairman, said conferences would be held with House leaders to see how they want to handle the problem.

He said the Senate did not want to be in the position of forcing the House to accept outside ideas.

That would put the issue up to Speaker Thomas D. Graham, D-Cole County, who takes his fight against U.S. Supreme Court decrees to Washington Friday in an appearance before a House committee there.

Earlier he told the Supreme Court to go to hell but later apologized.

Graham is pushing for congressional action to call a constitutional convention so the states could set up at least one house of their legislatures on a basis other than population.

Missouri and about a dozen other states have passed resolutions petitioning Congress to act.

On congressional redistricting, also ordered by the courts, Avery said a preliminary bill making a few changes will be introduced soon.

Then it will be referred to a subcommittee for further study before a final plan is drawn up.

Bill To Exempt Physicians and Blood Banks from Antitrust Laws Introduced by Sen. Long

United States Senator Edward V. Long (D. Mo.) today introduced a bill to exempt physicians and non-profit community blood banks from the jurisdiction of the Federal antitrust laws.

"Our antitrust laws were meant to apply to economic and profit - making business activities, not to non-profit, medical services such as blood transfusion," said Senator Long in a statement prepared for use on the Senate floor.

Senator Long introduced a similar bill in the 88th Congress following Federal Trade Commission proceedings against the Kansas City Community Blood Bank and a number of area doctors. The FTC action was brought after two small commercial blood banks claimed that the community facility and Kansas City doctors were conspiring to prevent their sales of blood to patients needing transfusion. The first rulings of the FTC examiner have been against the community bank, finding the organization and associated doctors in restraint of trade. The full Commission has not yet handed down its final decision.

"Hearings on this measure were held last year before the Senate Subcommittee on Antitrust and Monopoly. They revealed widespread support for the bill from virtually the entire medical profession. Organizations endorsing the measure included: the American Medical Association, the American Association of Blood Banks, the American Hospital Association, and the American Public Health Association," the Missouri Senator said.

"Our antitrust laws were never intended to serve as the basis for actions against valuable, non - profit community medical facilities and service.

"Whole blood is a living human tissue. It should never be considered a commodity to be sold on the market like maple syrup," Senator Long said.

Elks Lodge is Chartered for Sikeston Group

Franklin J. Fitzpatrick of Chicago, Grand Secretary of the Order, notified Mr. Bollinger, that Robert G. Pruitt, of Atlanta, Georgia, Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks, had issued the dispensation in response to the petition that had been forwarded recently by the local group. Mr. Fred Danner, Secretary and Mr. Raymert Miller, Treasurer of the Organization Committee at a meeting Sunday announced that 218 had paid the initiation fee for charter membership of the Elks Lodge at Sikeston. An initiation will be held as part of the institution ceremonies.

The Girl Scout Appreciation Dinner for adults, scheduled as a special event during Girl Scout Week is to be held at the Sikeston Armory, Monday night, March 8 at 6:30. This is a change in date and place from an earlier announcement.

Leaders, assistant leaders, and other adults who are contributing in many ways to the promotion of Girl Scouting for the Sikeston area, are to be honored at this dinner.

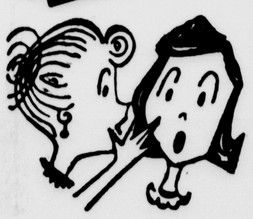

Mrs. Lonnie Standley, chairman for the observance of Girl Scout week March 7-14, has on her committee Mrs. Joel Montgomery directing the Appreciation Dinner; Mrs. Robert Mitchell, in charge of the distribution of tags throughout the week; Mrs. Gene Nunnelee, profiles on local Girl Scout leaders and their assistants; Mrs. Ed Matthews, store displays; and Mrs. Charles Conn, scout recordings for public announcements. Interstate Highway Program Passes Halfway Mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction on the world's greatest highway program yet conceived — the 41,000-mile U.S. interstate system — is past the halfway mark and just about on schedule.

The program was set up by Congress in 1956 and 1972 set as the target date for completion.

It will consist of 41,000 miles of high-speed highways to connect the nation's principal metropolitan areas, cities and industrial centers and to serve as a defense network of roads if needed.

The system generally is designed to take motorists whizzing along without worries about intersections, traffic lights and jammed city streets.

Today, a little more than eight years after the program was launched, 19,018 miles are open for traffic; construction is under way on another 5,196 miles, while engineering work or right-of-way acquisition is in progress for another 12,103.

The remaining 4,680 miles in the system are listed by the Bureau of Public Roads as in preliminary status or not started.

Thus, about 89 per cent of the system is open or under way.

The bureau says the program is about on schedule and that completion in 1972 is possible. However, time is getting short for the drafting of plans for the unstarted segments, a spokesman said.

The pinch, he said, will be on segments in the urban areas — the roads designed to take traffic through, under or around cities. These portions of the system are costly because of the high value of the rights of way involved and frequently the routes are controversial.

When the interstate system was authorized by Congress it called for a network of 40,000 miles of highways to cost an estimated $28 billion. The mileage has been increased to more than 41,000 and the latest cost estimated by the roads administrator, Rex M. Whitton, is $46.8 billion.

The latest estimate represents a $5.8-billion increase over the estimate submitted to Congress in 1961.

Through 1964, a total of $21.7 billion had been spent on the interstate system, roughly $19 billion of it federal money and $2.6 billion state money.

The federal share is financed by highway users through taxes on gasoline, new trucks and buses, tires and tubes and the like.

Today's Spanish Lesson

By William Archer
Lesson No. 13

Reading time 5 min. Study time 5 min.

"Key" #5 -- Now we will give you another "key" to verbs. It is, 'tengo que', and it means, 'I have to' (as a duty or a necessity). It is pronounced 'TANG-go/k', How many times do you say, 'I have to go to class, to the hotel, to work, etc.?. In English, when you say, 'I have', it calls for a noun -- 'I have a book, job, money, etc.'. When you put the preposition 'to' behind 'I have', you make it necessity or duty -- 'I have to work, etc.'. The same is true in Spanish. If you say in Spanish, 'tengo' ('TANG-go'), 'I have', it calls for a noun the same as in English -- 'Tengo un libro', 'I have a book'; and when you add 'que' (pronounced 'k') to 'tengo', it is the same as putting the preposition 'to' after 'have' in English:

A) I have to
B) Tengo que
C) TANG-go/k
A) I have
B) Tengo
C) TANG-go
A) I have to go to my office.
B) Tengo que ir a mi oficina.
C) TANGO -go/k/ear ah/ me/ oh-fee-see-nah.

This is a very valuable "key", because you can use it as often as you do in English. 'I have' is 'tengo'; 'I have to' is 'tengo que'.

Now you can say 'I have to go, but I don't want to'. 'I am going to go -- I have to'.

'Work' is an essential word with 'tengo que'. It is, 'trabajar' (trah-bah-HAR):

A) I have to work.
B) Tengo que trabajar.
C) TANG-go/k/trah-bah-HAR
A) I want to play, but I have to work.
B) Quiero jugar, pero tengo que trabajar.
C) key - AIR - o/who - GAR/ PAIR - roe/TANG - gok/trah-bah-HAR.
A) I have to go.
B) Tengo quie ir.
C) TANG-go--k--ear.

You can easily see how this new "key" gives you tremendous latitude in Spanish. It is an interesting "key", particularly in view of the numbers of times you employ it in English every day.

The State Reorganization Commission of Missouri

DEPARTMENTAL REORGANIZATION

31. Recommendation:

That the Department of Public Health and Welfare be abolished and that each of the present divisions of the department, Public Health, Welfare, and Mental Diseases be given departmental status.

The Department of Public Health and Welfare is specifically provided for in the state consitution (Art. IV, Sec. 37). Since its creation in 1945, the department has consisted of three major divisions; public health; welfare; and mental diseases. The statutes adopted in 1945 and subsequent legislation over the years related to the department, however, have not created a 'paper' department with each of the three divisions in practice and by statute having a high degree of independence from the director of the department or from each other. The directors of the Divisions of Health and Welfare are appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Senate. By statute, the Division of Mental Diseases is under the general supervision of a state mental health commission. The Commission appoints the director of the Division of Mental Diseases for a term of four years.

The 1955 State Reorganization Commission recommended that the three divisions "be integrated into a functional department." This recommendation has not been adopted. Since 1955 each of the divisions has expanded and increased its programs and services. Although certain programs have required close cooperation among two or all three of the divisions (placement of patients released from state hospitals to private or nursing homes), the fact remains that the major functions of each division are distinct from the functions of the other divisions. For almost 20 years the fiction of a single department has been maintained despite the actual organization and functions of the three divisions. It would appear both logical and practical to establish each division as a department. In order to do so, two constitutional amendments will be required. One amendment will be needed to delete the section of the constitution which provides that there shall be "a department of public health and welfare" (Art. IV, Sec. 37). The other amendment would change the section of the constitution limiting the number of departments so as to allow for the creations of two additional departments (Art. IV, Sec. 12).

INTERDEPARTMENTAL COORDINATION

32. Recommendation:

That the proposed departments of Public Health, Welfare, and Mental Diseases establish joint coordinated programs for research, statistics, and data processing.

The present Divisions of Health, Welfare, and Mental Diseases each presently has separate units for the gathering and preparing of research data and statistics, and the programming and operation of data processing equipment. By consolidating their research data programs as well as their data processing equipment, more comprehensive and useful information could be made available to each department. A single, jointly - sponsored data processing center to serve the three departments could bring about economies in personnel and equipment.

DIVISION OF HEALTH

The state legislature has declared that it is "the general duty and responsibility of the Division of Health to safeguard the health of the people in the state. . ." The statutes specify that the division shall maintain the following bureaus. (1) Vital Statistics; (2) Laboratories; (3) Communicable Diseases; (4) Food and Drug Inspection; (5) Child Hygiene; (6) Public Health Nursing; (7) Tuberculosis Control; (8) Cancer Control; and (9) Dental Health. Other bureaus may be established as necessary.

The 1955 State Reorganization Commission recommended that the laws be changed by deleting specific reference to the bureaus and leave to the administrative discretion the number of bureaus essential to the performance of the Division of Health. This recommendation has not been adopted. However, a second recommendation of the Commission calling for a consolidation of the several bureaus into four units or sections has been carried out by administrative order of the director of the Division of Health.

The present organization of the Division of Health consists of the following four sections: General Services; Hospital and Technical Services; Chronic Diseases; and Local Health Services. Each is headed by a section director, and is under the supervision of the deputy director of the Division of Health. The director of the section of general services is also assistant director of health (administration). The deputy director also supervises four additional programs not assigned to any section: community health and training unit; program planning and development; health mobilization; and maternal and child health.

Bill To Exempt Physicians and Blood Banks from Antitrust Laws Introduced by Sen. Long

United States Senator Edward V. Long (D. Mo.) today introduced a bill to exempt physicians and non-profit community blood banks from the jurisdiction of the Federal antitrust laws.

"Our antitrust laws were meant to apply to economic and profit - making business activities, not to non-profit, medical services such as blood transfusion," said Senator Long in a statement prepared for use on the Senate floor.

Senator Long introduced a similar bill in the 88th Congress following Federal Trade Commission proceedings against the Kansas City Community Blood Bank and a number of area doctors. The FTC action was brought after two small commercial blood banks claimed that the community facility and Kansas City doctors were conspiring to prevent their sales of blood to patients needing transfusion. The first rulings of the FTC examiner have been against the community bank, finding the organization and associated doctors in restraint of trade. The full Commission has not yet handed down its final decision.

"Hearings on this measure were held last year before the Senate Subcommittee on Antitrust and Monopoly. They revealed widespread support for the bill from virtually the entire medical profession. Organizations endorsing the measure included; the American Medical Association, the American Association of Blood Banks, the American Hospital Association, and the American Public Health Association," the Missouri Senator said.

"Our antitrust laws were never intended to serve as the basis for actions against valuable, non - profit community medical facilities and service.

"Whole blood is a living human tissue. It should never be considered a commodity to be sold on the market like maple syrup," Senator Long said.

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL at 27 years old, his age when he invented the telephone. March 3 was the 118th birthdate anniversary of Bell.

The 118th Anniversary of Bell, Inventor of Telephone

It's simple. Just pick up the receiver, dial a few digits and before long someone answers at the other end of the line.

The telephone is taken for granted in the modern world, but the vital communications link hasn't always been around. "The practical thinking and hard work of a man born 118 years ago March 3 resulted in phone service as we know it," said John Donoho, local Southwestern Bell manager.

"Alexander Graham Bell's first crude telephone was the initial step in bringing the world closer together in verbal communications. It laid the groundwork for almost unbelievable steps now being taken," Donoho continued.

Born March 3, 1847, in Edinburgh, Scotland, Bell did not set out to invent the telephone. "The telephone was the byproduct of Bell's scientific study of speech processes. His goal was to help the deaf speak," Donoho noted.

"As a scientist, Bell delved into a wide variety of subjects, and he made a number of lesser known, but also important, contributions."

When Bell was 23 years old, his parents moved from London to Brantford, Ontario, in an effort to improve his health. The move succeeded, and Bell began teaching a few months later in a school for the deaf in Boston.

Meanwhile, he continued experiments in electric vibrations, and his tireless work and imaginative thinking eventually resulted in a primitive instrument to transmit recognizable voice sounds.

Bell received the basic patent for his invention March 7, 1876, at the age of 29. He had worked out the principle of transmitting speech electrically at 27.

Use of telephones has since mushroomed. "It's hard to imagine what Sikeston's business and social life might be today without Bell's invention," Donoho said.

The manager points out that for more than 45 years after inventing the telephone, Bell lived a vigorous and creative life, continuing his unselfish service to the deaf and making the following contributions to science:

—Perfecting an electric probe used in surgery several years before discovery of X-rays.

—Working on a vacuum jacket having the same purpose as today's iron lung.

—Developing a method for locating icebergs at sea by detecting echoes.

—Working on various projects in aviation, including research in jet and rocket power. Bell's airplane, Silver Dart, was the first to fly in the British Commonwealth.

—Developing hydrofoils powered by aircraft propellers.

—Developing the Photophone, which made it possible for speech to be transmitted on a beam of light. This research led to later development of this optical maser.

Housewives Pickup Extra Cash by Aiding Bookmakers

NEW YORK (AP) — Police have launched a crackdown against housewives who use telephones to aid bookmakers and earn up to $100 a week.

Police Commissioner Michael J. Murphy disclosed Tuesday that 24 housewives have been arrested in seven weeks for operating illegal telephone answering services from their homes while hubby is at work and the kids are in school.

Murphy said: "We have driven bookmakers from the street, from candy stores and bars and grills, from conventional answering services, from hotel rooms and from ordinary wire services. We will spare no effort to root out this new development in bookmaking operations."

Police say the housewives pick up tax-free pin money of from $50 to $100 a week for their simple services. While making the beds, washing the dishes or vacuumming the rugs, they answer the telephone and take down a message from a $2-and-up bettor.

Murphy said the women don't actually take any bets.

The messages for the bookies may be something like: "Call Joe at such-and-such a number."

Periodically, the bookie calls the housewife and picks up his messages. He then calls the betors, takes the bets and gives a fictional name for a housewife and a telephone number to call the next day for another round in the operation.

Murphy said some housewives have been handling calls for several bookies. Big volume bookies use more than one housewife.

Murphy warned that housewives performing such services were "aiding and abetting a criminal activity" and liable to a $50 fine and five days in jail.

Leo The Pet Lion

NORRISTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Leo the pet lion, center of a controversy between his owner, Howard Sautter of nearby Willow Grove, and the Abington Township Board of Commissioners, was on the winning side in court Wednesday.

Common Pleas Court Judge Robert Honeyman dismissed a complaint which sought to force Sautter, 54, to give up his pet.

The township, acting under an ordinance passed last December outlawing all wild animals, contended that Leo was a potential danger.

Honeyman called the township's complaint insufficient. He said there "must be allegation of nuisance — including, but not limited, to hazardous or dangerous activities to support the prayer for relief."

He gave the township 20 days to amend its complaint.

Leo The Pet Lion

NORRISTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Leo the pet lion, center of a controversy between his owner, Howard Sautter of nearby Willow Grove, and the Abington Township Board of Commissioners, was on the winning side in court Wednesday.

Common Pleas Court Judge Robert Honeyman dismissed a complaint which sought to force Sautter, 54, to give up his pet.

The township, acting under an ordinance passed last December outlawing all wild animals, contended that Leo was a potential danger.

Honeyman called the township's complaint insufficient. He said there "must be allegation of nuisance — including, but not limited, to hazardous or dangerous activities to support the prayer for relief."

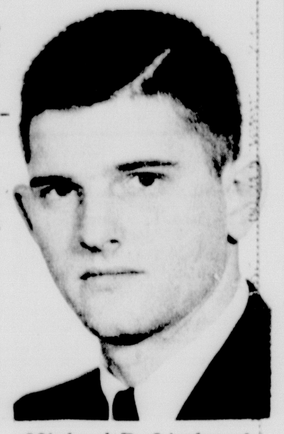

He gave the township 20 days to amend its complaint.

THE BIBLE

The Bible was written for all times, inasmuch as it contains the Organic Law of God which is immutable and everlasting. It also explains the operation of that Universal Law upon all created things, upon men and nations since the dawn of creation, nearly six thousand years ago.

And reaching out into the dim future it portrays the Divine Law applicable to man's ultimate destiny. It is a standard history of the World; and the perfection, grandeur and simplicity of literature and poetry. It establishes a close connection and means of communication between the Creator and Man.

It contains the only practical system of the science of Eugenics. It links in an unbroken chain the first man Adam, to the last man born today, or to be born hereafter as long as the world shall stand.

For eye hath not seen nor ear heard Isaiah 64:12, 1st Corinthians 2:9.

Legislatures may enact special laws, repeal or alter laws because they pertain to finite perishable human affairs, that requre conformity with altered conditions.

But the Divine Law is infinite, eternal, unchangeable, because it pertains to spiritual things which never change. It is a part of the Creator Himself, and any change in Him can not even be imagined.

Nations and men have sought to divert the fixed course of the Divine Law, but have gone down beneath the sands of the desert. That is the history of the past thousand years and it is constantly repeating itself.

Man must come to the Bible, a truism that will bear repeating. God established what are known and now considered as "Natural Laws" or "laws of nature" and will always permit them to follow out the designs for which they were established. The soul is of the highest importance -- "For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul." No man knows when the end of all things shall come. It is sufficient for him to know that his personal end will be be long in coming.

"Behold, I come quickly",, says Christ, and to this may be added the words of the Psalmist: "For a thousand years in Thy sight, are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night." The Bible proclaims equality among men and shows their mutual relations, moral, social and political, and determines the conditions upon which to found the perfect brotherhood of man. It is vain for man to hope to find another way to eternity and no one knows when the last whisper of Time shall beat against the Eternal Gates.

SHOULD PAY FOR MEDICAL INSURANCE

Being one of the so-called Senior Citizens (65 or over), we certainly haven't anything against being guaranteed medical care in our old age.

We do object however, to placing half the cost on employers who are already paying unemployment compensation, half of the Social Security, and several other items, in addition to being charged with taking out of pay checks money for state and federal income taxes, insurance and health benefits and other costs. If the federal government enacts legislation providing medical care for the older folks, and we think it should, the payments should all come from the checks of those who will get the benefits, and not half from the employer who must pay all of his own Social Security.

One of the greatest problems the average employer faces is the fact that a worker tends to get the idea he is being paid only that which he can take home, since he never sees all the money taken out for the various required deductions. It results in dissatisfaction with their wages in some cases, and in others, greatly added costs for the operator of a business. Any business can stand just so much of a drain before it gets to the point where there is no profit, and as a result -- no business and no wages being paid. There lies a great danger in the half and half proposal for Medicare. -- Paris Appeal.

GAS EXPLOSION KILLS SEVENTEEN -- Spectators examine the wreckage of a still-smouldering house in Natchitoches, La., one of six set afire in a gas pipeline explosion. At least 17 persons, nine of them children, were killed in the explosion. Five or six persons were missing. The burning houses hampered the search for the missing. (NEA TELEPHOTO)

Rural Area Looks Like A War-Torn Battlefield

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — A rural home area near this peaceful northwest Louisiana town looks like a war-torn battlefield today.

Five homes are leveled, cars lie in melted heaps, and 17 persons are dead after a geyser of flame erupted from an underground natural-gas pipeline explosion Thursday. The dead include nine children.

"All Louisiana citizens mourn the terrible loss of life," said Gov. John McKeithen. "It is imperative that all resources at the command of this state insure that something like this does not happen again."

Tennessee Gas Transmission Co. officials said only a laboratory analysis might tell what ruptured its 32-inch pipeline.

The line, part of a 2,000 mile system channeling natural gas from South Texas to New England, is six feet below ground. It lies some 150 yards from the devastated row of modest frame homes.

The company said its division chief, W. C. McGee Jr. of Houston, Tex., was in Natchitoches —a town of 15,000 some 75 miles south of Shreveport — to assist survivors, including financial help.

Firm officials and State Police estimated damages to the homes, land, and pipeline at over $1 million.

The blast tore a 15-foot crater knifing 75 feet long and sent a fireball shooting 400 feet.

"I knew what it was," said Corbett Smith, who lives about 400 yards away. "The roar that followed was like a cyclone following. Then, the ground started quivering."

The flames soared for half an hour before Tennessee Gas crewmen could cut off the gas main.

The fire scorched five other homes and a sawmill one-quarter mile away. It turned trees into black sticks and seared the earth of all plant life in a 10-acre area.

"Bodies were scattered everywhere," said Deputy Sheriff D. W. Bryant. "Most of them were burned and charred past the point where you could recognize them."

Fourteen of the dead were from two families. In one house, the blast killed Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Rond, three of their children and three small grandchildren.

At a nearby home, the victims were the Rev. and Mrs. Jack Van Meter, their three small childre and Mrs. Van Meter's mother, Mrs. Lawson Antley, 47.

The eight members of the Rond family will be buried together after services today. A mass funeral for the six members of the Van Meter family will be held Saturday.

Funeral services will also be held Saturday for Mrs. William Ammons, 28, and her three-month-old son and Lewis Gillcrease, 44.

Eight persons were hospitalized, including William Ammons, husband of the dead woman, and two of their sons. Also hospitalized was H. G. Martin, his wife, and a son and daughter.

Police Chief Boyd Burr said the same line blew up in 1954. There were no casualties then.

SHOULD PAY FOR MEDICAL INSURANCE

Being one of the so-called Senior Citizens (65 or over), we certainly haven't anything against being guaranteed medical care in our old age.

We do object however, to placing half the cost on employers who are already paying unemployment compensation, half of the Social Security, and several other items, in addition to being charged with taking out of pay checks money for state and federal income taxes, insurance and health benefits and other costs. If the federal government enacts legislation providing medical care for the older folks, and we think it should, the payments should all come from the checks of those who will get the benefits, and not half from the employer who must pay all of his own Social Security.

One of the greatest problems the average employer faces is the fact that a worker tends to get the idea he is being paid only that which he can take home, since he never sees all the money taken out for the various required deductions. It results in dissatisfaction with their wages in some cases, and in others, greatly added costs for the operator of a business. Any business can stand just so much of a drain before it gets to the point where there is no profit, and as a result -- no business and no wages being paid. There lies a great danger in the half and half proposal for Medicare. -- Paris Appeal.

A paper company brags it can package anything in paper cartons. But as far as we know, pneumonia still comes in chests.

GAS EXPLOSION KILLS SEVENTEEN -- Spectators examine the wreckage of a still-smouldering house in Natchitoches, La., one of six set afire in a gas pipeline explosion. At least 17 persons, nine of them children, were killed in the explosion. Five or six persons were missing. The burning houses hampered the search for the missing. (NEA TELEPHOTO)

Rural Area Looks Like A War-Torn Battlefield

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — A rural home area near this peaceful northwest Louisiana town looks like a war-torn battlefield today.

Five homes are leveled, cars lie in melted heaps, and 17 persons are dead after a geyser of flame erupted from an underground natural-gas pipeline explosion Thursday. The dead include nine children.

"All Louisiana citizens mourn the terrible loss of life," said Gov. John McKeithen. "It is imperative that all resources at the command of this state insure that something like this does not happen again."

Tennessee Gas Transmission Co. officials said only a laboratory analysis might tell what ruptured its 32-inch pipeline.

The line, part of a 2,000 mile system channeling natural gas from South Texas to New England, is six feet below ground. It lies some 150 yards from the devastated row of modest frame homes.

The company said its division chief, W. C. McGee Jr. of Houston, Tex., was in Natchitoches —a town of 15,000 some 75 miles south of Shreveport — to assist survivors, including financial help.

Firm officials and State Police estimated damages to the homes, land, and pipeline at over $1 million.

The blast tore a 15-foot crater knifing 75 feet long and sent a fireball shooting 400 feet.

"I knew what it was," said Corbett Smith, who lives about 400 yards away. "The roar that followed was like a cyclone following. Then, the ground started quivering."

The flames soared for half an hour before Tennessee Gas crewmen could cut off the gas main.

The fire scorched five other homes and a sawmill one-quarter mile away. It turned trees into black sticks and seared the earth of all plant life in a 10-acre area.

"Bodies were scattered everywhere," said Deputy Sheriff D. W. Bryant. "Most of them were burned and charred past the point where you could recognize them."

Fourteen of the dead were from two families. In one house, the blast killed Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Rond, three of their children and three small grandchildren.

At a nearby home, the victims were the Rev. and Mrs. Jack Van Meter, their three small childre and Mrs. Van Meter's mother, Mrs. Lawson Antley, 47.

The eight members of the Rond family will be buried together after services today. A mass funeral for the six members of the Van Meter family will be held Saturday.

Funeral services will also be held Saturday for Mrs. William Ammons, 28, and her three-month-old son and Lewis Gilcrease, 44.

Eight persons were hospitalized, including William Ammons, husband of the dead woman, and two of their sons. Also hospitalized was H. G. Martin, his wife, and a son and daughter.

Police Chief Boyd Burr said the same line blew up in 1954. There were no casualties then.
